Rooseveltian Theories Held Wild Groping By Economist

Dr. Neil Carothers Calls New Deal Series of 'Interferences.'

Looses Blast From Institute Rostrum

But Hecklers Arise on Floor to Defend Recovery Policies.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 9.—President Roosevelt and his Administration tonight were charged in vigorous language with conducting "a blind, unplanned, hysterical and self-contradictory series of economic experiments and interferences," designed as a "desperate effort by Government to please the masses, to satisfy popular prejudices and to placate importunate and self-seeking minorities."

Such was the indictment drawn by Dr. Neil Carothers, professor of economics and director of the college of business administration at Lehigh University, on the evening program of the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs.

Dr. Carothers contended that not alone was the New Deal recovery program founded on "economic error, but that it has retarded recovery. The way for economic recovery, he asserted, was opened in the summer of 1932 and for the last two years "has been at the door begging admittance"—but the experimentation of the New Deal had barred its entrance.

"All it asks now," he added, "is assurance that there will be no more experiments, no more interferences, no more regimentation, no more waste, no more restriction of production, no more debasement, no more recovery by act of Congress."

Demarest Lloyd a Speaker.

Seldom has such a competent economist as Dr. Carothers more sharply indicted the recovery aspects of the New Deal. His speech constituted another barrage from the ranks of the American Liberty League since that organization sponsored his appearance here.

Earlier in the day Demarest Lloyd, Washington magazine publisher, member of the advisory council of the American Liberty League and leader of the round table on "Constitution and the New Deal," took the rostrum as a speaker, while Dr. Carothers sat as presiding referee. As occurred yesterday, the Liberty League speaker had the ring to himself—the New Deal's spokesman having defaulted—but again the audience came to the defense of the Roosevelt Administration, more sharply and more angrily than yesterday.

Lloyd's theme was "Fabian Socialism in the New Deal." He professed to see in the New Deal a carefully laid plot by followers of Karl Marx to "bore from within" in behalf of public ownership and the destruction of private fortunes. He struck a parallel of Socialistic aims and New Deal measures to substantiate his contention, as well as citing a number of persons more or less associated with the Socialist Party as New Deal figures.

Rabbi Defends New Deal.

"Thus you see that all this alleged New Deal is nothing more nor less than a lot of 'old stuff' brought in Trojan horse fashion without a word about Socialism, class war, dictatorship, Karl Marx, but under cover of an assortment of bromidic slogans about ushering in the New Heaven on Earth," he asserted. "This is a case of putting over Socialism by sleight of hand and that is a pure example of Fabian Socialism or Fabianism."

Boiled down to essentials, Lloyd's strongest point was that the New Deal program, as it has finally developed, represents an antithesis of what the Democratic Party promised the country in the 1932 campaign. The country did not vote for Socialism that year and in many previous campaigns rejected it, he contended. But President Roosevelt, he asserted, after accepting the Democratic platform "100 per cent," has since his inauguration "violated practically every important provision in it."

Without a New Deal adversary to answer him, although Senator Rush

Their Marriage Was Short-Lived

This was the loving scene observed here when Max Baer and Mary Ellen Sullivan, of Washington, were married. Yesterday they were parted.

Former Champion and His Wife of Less Than Two Weeks Part When She Insists on Remarriage by Priest; Nuptials an Event for Capital.

New York, July 9.—The marriage of Max Baer, playboy of pugilism, and Mary Ellen Sullivan, former Washington restaurant hostess, already has cracked up, ten days after it was solemnized in the National Capital.

Baer made this known to this correspondent today. He said religious differences were to blame.

"When I married Miss Sullivan," the former heavyweight champion said, "I did not believe that her religious beliefs were so strong.

"She has demanded that we be remarried by a Catholic priest.

"The fact that I am Jewish makes this impossible, and there can be no compromise."

Baer was out on Broadway tonight with Mary Kirk Brown, Georgia heiress, who was engaged to him at one time.

Baer has asked his bride of ten days, his "Irish Rose," to meet him tomorrow morning to arrange for a financial settlement and a formal dissolution of their marriage.

The last time the couple was together was Saturday. Along with The Post's correspondent, they went to West End, a resort in New Jersey. They seemed then to be on the verge of an estrangement, although Max continued to talk about reforming and rearing a family.

It was recalled today that when Baer first went to Washington to marry Miss Sullivan, he journeyed to nearby Rockville to confer with a Catholic priest. Apparently he failed to make arrangements for the marriage there. He is, of course, a divorced man.

The wedding finally was performed Saturday a week ago by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, of the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

After proclaiming that he was the happiest man in the world, Max and his pretty colleen took a plane for New York. The next morning, Max accompanied his bride to mass in St. Jean the Baptiste Church.

He revealed that day that she wanted him to become a Catholic.

Bite Rewards Dog's Rescuer.

New York, July 9 (U.P.).—Six policemen who had perspired through seven hours of labor to dig a mongrel dog from a rock pile on the banks of the Harlem River had their reward tonight. While 500 spectators cheered, the dog bit Sgt. Paul Cavanaugh in the seat of the pants.

Shot Ends Life For Ray Long, Famed Editor

Rifle Found Beside Former Head of Magazine in California Home.

By the Associated Press.

Beverly Hills, Calif., July 9.—Ray Long, 57, noted magazine editor, writer and publisher, died tonight in the Emergency Hospital here from a gunshot wound in the mouth.

Long was found unconscious in the bedroom of his home. There was a small rifle at his side, Glenn Blair, ambulance driver, said.

Blair said the wound appeared to have been self-inflicted.

Dr. R. C. Nelson at the hospital operated immediately, but Long died within a few moments, without regaining consciousness.

Blair said he was summoned to the house by a woman who said she was the maid.

Detectives were dispatched to examine the premises.

Long, who for 12 years was editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine and president and editor of the International Magazine Co., publishing Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping and other magazines, was said to have been one of the highest paid editors of all time, receiving in salary and company profits some $180,000 a year.

He was born in Lebanon, Ind., March 23, 1878, educated in Indianapolis schools and began his first newspaper work on the Indianapolis News in 1900. He became managing editor of the Cincinnati Post in 1905 and worked in a similar capacity for the Cleveland Press. In 1910 he became editor of Hamp-

New Serum Prevents Measles, Maryland Physician Discloses

A definite preventive for measles, known as "convalescent serum," a serum extracted from infected persons, has been developed by the medical world.

Dr. C. Loring Joslin, of the University of Maryland Medical School, who explained the new serum to several hundred mothers attending the State Parent Teacher conference at College Park, Md., yesterday said the preventive was not yet universally known.

He said there were two ways the serum might be administered. Should it be known that a person had been exposed to measles and the serum given within three weeks the disease will not take affect.

However, he declared, the usual way was to wait from three to five days after the first signs of the disease before administring the serum. The patient will then develop a very mild case of measles, without complications.

A very slight rash will be noticeable and a mild temperature will linger for two or three days. After this passes the patient will then be forever immune from measues.

Dr. Joslin, who assisted in the development of the new measles serum, said that physians also expect to complete development within a short while of a serum that will conquer scarlet fever.

Scarlet fever specialists throughout the country are now working on this, he said. At present the disease is still confusing the medical profession and laymen. Especially is it confusing to those who are attempting to determine what persons are "carriers" of the disease.

He explained that antitoxin for diphtheria will immunize a patient for only three weeks, while a toxin is permanent if administered six months before contact with diphtheria.

PWA Heads Told to Spend Fund In Year

Roosevelt Urges Speed at Conference With Administrators.

3,500,000 Will Be Put to Work by Nov. 15, Hopkins Asserts.

Urging speed in the works relief program, President Roosevelt yesterday told State PWA administrators gathered in his office that "we want the work done, but we want it done now."

"We don't want it to run over into 1937 and 1938," he said. "This money was given to us by the Congress to spend during the fiscal year."

The PWA administrators were addressed earlier in the day by Secretary Ickes, Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, and Frank C. Walker, head of the division of applications and information. Hopkins told them that he expected 3,500,000 persons to be put to work by November 15.

Funds Available.

"You know, of course, that we have spent a great deal of money during the past two years," the President told the administrators, "but we find now not only that there are additional funds at our disposal but also that the need of permanent work all over the United States is not yet ended. We find that the deeper we go into it, the more opportunities we have to do constructive work in almost every community in the country."

The President said he believed "we can take a pardonable pride" in what has already been done in public works. He warned that "we are faced with a kind of false information in regard to the expenditure of money."

Promises to Repay.

"The actual listing of the projects we have worked on and completed or are at work on today—the mere telling to the people what we have accomplished—will dispel the false information that has been given out in many cases," he said. "We are going to repay the money we have spent many times over. We have increased the capital assets of the Nation."

The President said "one thing we know" is that projects have been kept free from partisan politics.

"The PWA," he said, "has set up a standard and an example for integrity in administration and disinterested public service."

He predicted that before the year is ended "we will end the dole we have been paying to employable persons during the last two years."

The President emphasized, as he has done often before, that the average cost of projects must not run more than $1,143 per man per year, including cost of both labor and materials. He declared that the increase of PWA grants from 30 per cent to 45 per cent of the total cost of projects would be "quite an incentive" for local governments to go ahead with works projects.

He recalled his order of last week providing that new building projquoddy project and the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Then Corcoran was called to the stand. He spoke raipidly, paraphrasing a statement he previously had prepared for the press.

This is what he said he told Brewster, in the presence of Dr. Gruening, in Statuary Hall:

"Now to say in front of Ernest (Gruening) what I have said to you before. I don't wish to reflect on your personal integrity, but I think that if you and I are brutally frank now it will avoid personal misun-

Ickes Brands Virgin Isles Judge 'Unfit'

Tydings Threatens to Probe Intimidation of Witnesses.

By Felix Bruner.

Secretary Ickes took a hand in the Virgin Island inquiry yesterday with a demand that T. Webber Wilson, Federal judge on the islands and a witness on Monday before the investigating committee, be removed for judicial misconduct.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, chairman of the investigating committee, threatened to stop the hearing and inquire into alleged intimidation of witnesses.

Ross Collins, former Representative and now an attorney for the Interior Department, denied there had been any intimidation of witnesses by the department.

Tydings charged that Ickes had given interviews to newspapers "which, to say the least, do not reflect the facts."

Aimed at Cummings.

Meanwhile, Paul Yates, ousted assistant to Gov. Paul Pearson, Virgin Islands chief executive, continued before the committee a drab recital of details of his stay on the islands to back up his charges of "maladministration and graft."

Ickes' direct demand for removal of Judge Wilson was in effect a criticism of Attorney General Cummings. Wilson was appointed by Cummings and can be removed at his pleasure. Pearson, a Republican, is being strongly defended by Ickes. Wilson, a former Democratic member of Congress from Mississippi, counts among his supporters Postmaster General Farley, Cummings and Senator Pat Harrison.

The Virgin Islands storm, rivaling some of the hurricanes which occasionally sweep over the Government rum distillery there, broke yesterday morning when Ickes demanded in his press conference that the committee "bring forth a few facts." He said he had written a letter to Senator Tydings expressing his view of the inquiry, but neither he nor Tydings would disclose its contents.

"I would like to know who has been financing all the disturbances in the Virgin Islands," Ickes said. "I would like to know why they are so afrad of cross-examination if they want to tell the truth."

Has Suspicions.

Ickes charged that he had been denied the right to appear before the committee and to make an opening statement or to cross-examine witnesses. He said Tydings previously wrote him a letter promising him this privilege.

Asked who he thought was "financing disturbances" in the Virgin Islands, Ickes would go no further than to say "I have my suspicions."

"Except Judge Wilson, the only witnesses who have been put on the stand," Ickes continued, "have been discharged for inefficiency, incompetence and disloyalty. The lawyers, when they aren't asking questions, are giving testimony themselves.

"I have been of the opinion for some time that Judge Wilson ought to be removed from office for judicial misconduct. In the Mackintosh case (a case which has been made an issue at the hearing) he acted as prosecutor, judge and jury. He explains that he did this under the Danish code which applies in the islands, but such action is abhorrent to Anglo axon jurisprudence.

"Wilson fined the United States

State, U. S. Groups Act to Meet New Menaces as Water Recedes, Leaving 40 Dead, 5 Missing, 3,000 Homeless; Loss at $10,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., July 9.—State and Federal governmental units joined tonight to combat the danger of disease and fire as receding flood waters left Upstate New York with 40 dead, 5 missing and property damage estimated at more than $10,000,000. Nearly 3,000 were homeless.

As the water surged into northern Pennsylvania from the devastated New York lowlands, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman outlined to the public health precautions that should be taken and explained what the State agencies are doing to relieve the suffering. A State-wide radio hookup was arranged for him.

Dr. Thomas H. Parran, jr., State health commissioner, warned persons in the flood-stricken areas to boil all drinking water.

"Our immediate problem is to remedy flooded water supplies," he said. "We are speeding aid and emergency chlorination apparatus into the section."

In many sections, fire apparatus was used to pump water from hundreds of inundated homes and stagnant pools to prevent typhoid fever.

At Hornell, authorities ordered all automobiles off the streets except those on urgent business so as to prevent raising of germ laden dust.

Fire added to the confusion in the flood zone, destroying five stores and apartments in Walton, Delaware County. Another fire swept through a store and restaurant in the flooded front street section of Binghamton. A third burned two large tanks of a Hornell gasoline storage plant.

Firemen battled the flames from rowboats or stood in water knee deep.

Steuben County alone estimated its damage would be about $4,500,000, Hornell and Watkins Glen each $1,000,000, Oneonta, $400,000, and Ithaca, $500,000.

Robert E. Bondy, Red Cross national disaster director, flew from Washington into the flood zone and took charge of the Federal relief measures.

Twenty or more towns in ten counties—Steuben, Chemung, Tioga, Cortland, Delaware, Broome, Otsego, Schuyler, Tompkins and Seneca—covering an area of some 7,000 square miles were seriously affected by water. The hardest hit

Brewster Shouts 'Liar' at Inquiry

Harris & Ewing.

"You're a liar"—Representative Ralph Brewster, Republican, of Maine (top photo), accusing Thomas Corcoran, RFC attorney, at House utilities lobby investigation yesterday. In lower photo, Corcoran is denying Brewster's charge of attempting to influence "death sentence" vote.

Bedlam at Hearing as 2 Principals Reveal 'Threat' Versions.

Offer Not to Vote Laid to Official

RFC Attorney Tells of Talks Before Poll on 'Death Clause.'

By Robert C. Albright.

The curtain screening one scene in the lobby drama that led up to House overthrow of the President's holding company "death sentence" recommendations was lifted yesterday before the House Rules Committee.

It disclosed Thomas G. Corcoran, RFC attorney, and ardent New Dealest, confronting across the witness table Representative Ralph O. Brewster, former Republican Governor of Maine, who accused the young lawyer of attempting to influence his vote.

They told conflicting versions of the same story—a story of congressional conferences, phone calls, round robins, promises and alleged threats, preceding the House vote on the Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company bill.

The hearing was orderly enough until Corcoran said Brewster offered to "duck" the vote on the "death sentence" amendment. Brewster, livid, raised himself slightly from his chair.

"You are a liar," he shouted.

"We'll see if I am," replied Corcoran.

Bedlam in Room.

The half-filled House caucus room was all bedlam until excited gavel poundings by Chairman John J. O'Connor restored a semblance of decorum. Corcoran was permitted to finish his story. And both witnesses were called back before the committee today.

The Corcoran-Brewster incident was the first of what may be a series of so-called lobbying disclosures, involving both Administration officials and utility company representatives arrayed against them on the other side of the issue. The Rules Committee already has power to subpena whomever of these it wishes. The Accounts Committee yesterday approved a $50,000 appropriation for the investigation.

Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, meanwhile was leaving no stone unturned to turn the Senate's own investigatorial spotlight on utilities lobbying. The Senate Audit Committee will meet today to pass on his request for $150,000 to conduct such an inquiry.

Many Present.

Scattered about the witness table at yesterday's House hearing were most of the members actively interested in the pending holding company legislation. Representative Sam Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, co-author of the bill, bent forward to catch every word. Standing behind the seated committee chairman was Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, who has charged Capitol "wire tapping" by utilities lobbyists.

Ferdinand Pecora, former stock market investigator for the Senate, later appointed to the bench, occupied a front seat. Asked what his role was, he shrugged: "Just a ringside spectator."

Brewster opened the hearing with a blunt reiteration of his charges that Corcoran threatened to stop work on the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project in Maine unless he cast his vote for the holding company "death sentence."

He recounted in detail his own story of what transpired between him and the brown-haired, youthful New Deal attorney July 1, the day of the House "death sentence" vote; how Corcoran had sought first to reach him by telephone, and later confronted him, in the company of Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions of the Department of Interior, in Statuary Hall.

Speaking slowly, Brewster went on:

"Gruening, I believe, spoke first. He said he believed I would make

House Leaders Air Grievances To Roosevelt

Patronage Trouble Listed Among Causes of Rebuff on Utility Bill.

By the Associated Press.

House Democratic leaders, at a conference last night with President Roosevelt, were reliably reported to have sought greater consideration for the desires of that branch of Congress.

The White House announced that the parley had been called at the request of Speaker Byrns and was for a general legislative discussion—including prospects for adjournment.

From some of the 14 Democratic chiefs included in the invitation, however, it was learned that it had been determined beforehand to tell the President the reasons for undercurrents of dissatisfaction in the House which brought defeat to his mandatory abolition for utility holding companies and threatened other measures on his "must" program.

Patronage Mentioned.

Numerous things, these leaders asserted, have brought the present feeling of dissatisfaction. Among them:

The fact that on several occasions the President has yielded to the Senate on matters on which he declined to bow to House wishes;

The continued trouble members are having over patronage.

The fact that the President declined to listen to the advice of some regularly elected leaders, who told

Vote Slated on Instructing Conferees Not to Press for Holding Ban.

The Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company bill was sent to conference by the Senate yesterday, but not before another direct Senate test had been ordered on the proposed "death sentence" for "unnecessary" utility holding companies.

The test will come at 2 p. m. today on a motion of Senator William H. Dieterich (Democrat), of Illinois, to instruct the conferees not to insist on the holding company dissolution section of the Senate bill.

Administration leaders immediately threw their full strength in debate against the motion, and it appeared last night they may defeat it by a narrow margin. In that event, foes of the "death sentence" will transfer their fight to conference, where an effort will be made either to eliminate the Senate section or kill the bill altogether.

Holt Fights for Death Clause.

Senator Dieterich originally had moved to concur in the House action, banning the "death sentence," but that motion was withdrawn yesterday in the course of turbulent debate, sprinkled with diatribes and personalities.

Leaders overlooked no bets in their battle to save the dissolution proviso, asked by the President. Even Rush D. Holt, West Virginia's 30-year-old Senator, was thrown into the breach with a maiden

Tax Collection Up $16,000,000 In Maryland, District for Year

An increase of more than $825,000,000 in Federal tax collections, including $16,000,000 additional in the District and Maryland, was reported yesterday.

Guy T. Helvering, internal revenue commissioner, made public figures which showed $3,297,300,578 flowed into Uncle Sam's coffers in the fiscal year ended June 30 as compared with $2,672,239,194 in 1934.

Improvement was shown all along the line. The advances included: Income taxes, $1,099,489,864 in 1935 against $817,025,339 in 1934; miscellaneous taxes, $1,671,489,000 against $1,463,790,069, and agricultural adjustment taxes $526,401,713 against $371,422,885.

Though Helvering did not draw any interferences from the upward trend, other New Deal officials were known to be gratified over the showing.

Maryland and the District, in the same tax district, produced 1935 revenue of $67,502,592 against $51,398,778 in 1934. The breakdown for types of taxes for the local district showed corporations income taxes, $13,402,941; individual income taxes, $16,876,994; miscellaneous internal revenue, $29,959,498, and agricultural adjustment taxes, $7,363,157.

Importers of distilled spirits paid customs levies of $14,200,365 in 1935, an outstanding rise over the mark of $2,332,898 reached in the previous 12 months.

The second New York district, with collections for all purposes of $319,746,012, led all districts in the country. Two other New York districts were above the $200,000,000 mark.

Other ranking States included the first Illinois district, $262,803,489; North Carolina, $283,677,545; Michigan, $135,153,037, and Massachusetts, $113,415,157.

Virginia receipts stood at $141,-236,851 last year.

Tax Hearings To Be Limited To Wealth Levy

House Committee Votes to Confine Itself to Roosevelt Program.

By the Associated Press.

The Roosevelt tax program yesterday won a preliminary victory against congressional efforts to broaden its wealth-tax limits.

After a fiery political discussion for and against New Deal policies, the House Ways and Means Committee locked its doors and voted to limit present hearings—and, tacitly, the resultant bill—to the things outlined in the President's tax message. That suggested new or increased taxes on inheritances, gifts, big corporation and big individual incomes.

But while Mr. Roosevelt mentioned individual incomes of $1,000,000 and over, the committee's action was not interpreted as setting a $1,000,000 stopping point.

Agreement "Unanimous."

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, reported the agreement was "unanimous." He predicted that when the time came to write a bill, attempts to insert other levies than those outlined by the President would fail.

It developed, however, that the agreement was "unanimous" only because all the Republican committeemen and Representative Thompson (Democrat), of Illinois, refrained from voting. The Republican explanation was that the Democrats, who outnumber them 18 to 7, were going to write the bill, anyway. Thompson declined to explain his reasons, but it was recalled that a number of his constituents were seeking adjustment of other tax rates.

The committee's balloting followed a give-and-take political discussion from which observers could not determine definitely which of 29 possible tax schedules estimated to raise anywhere from $118,000,000 to $901,500,000 annually the committee might favor.

N. Y. Board of Trade Views.

The board of trade, he said, "is unequivocably and most emphatically for increased taxation," but "voices strongly its opposition to class legislation."

Its ideas, he continued, are:

"That the new revenue legislation should be passed solely for the purpose of balancing the national budget.

"That the practice of meeting deficits by borrowing more money should be abolished as quickly as possible.

"That the imposition of new taxes be paralleled by effective steps to reduce our governmental expenditures. * * *

"That the increase in taxes should be applied not only to the higher income and estate tax brackets, but that taxes on all incomes and on all estates should be proportionately advanced."

The idea of an "enforced leveling down" of big fortunes, Seidman said, is not new, but "practical obstacles have been recognized and common sense has prevailed."

Asks Reassurance.

Then Seidman made a remark about how the Government should "reassure business."

"Is there anything the Government can do to assure business that it will make a profit?" interposed Doughton. "That is one of the most asounding, astonishing suggestions I ever heard made."

"No," Seidman replied, "but I think it can assure business it will not do anything to make it suffer a loss."

Then Representative Reed (Republican), New York, stepped in. He asked if it was "reassuring" to business to be afraid of inflation, dollar devaluation, expenditure of $4,880,000,000 for work relief, "uncontrolled importation of foreign goods to compete with American products," and half a dozen other things.

Seidman answered each question with "hardly" or "no" or "I don't think so."

"Correct," shot back Representative Woodruff (Republican), Michigan.

Sees Spending Orgy.

Politics was adjourned, but only for a moment. Woodruff took the witness and remarked that "we have been on a spending orgy for the last two years" which is a "mere bagatelle compared with what we're heading into."

Sees "Curious Situation."

He tried to win an agreement from the witness that "anybody with any intelligence knows that we can't spend this $4,880,000,000 intelligently in one year." All the answer he could get was a nod before Representative Dingell (Democrat), Michigan, joined the debate.

Dingell went back to the "reassurance" idea, contending that "Herbert Hoover reassured business on an average of once every three weeks."

"What good did that do?" he asked.

At an afternoon session, R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railways, asked the committee to give special consideration to railroads in replacing the present 13¾ per cent corporation income tax with a graduated levy.

He described it as a "curious situation" that after advocating, for "two decades," unification of rail systems into large corporations Congress now should be thinking of making the carriers pay heavier taxes because they had unified and their incomes were large.

Benjamin Marsh, representing the people's lobby, brought a laugh when he remarked that the Supreme Court had held the NRA unconstitutional because it knew NRA "was unpopular and wanted to help the Administration out."

Fletcher analyzed for the committee the result of graduated corporation taxes. Under the proposed schedules, he said, a man who invested in a small corporation might get $900 in dividends whereas the man who put the same amount of money in a big concern would get only $850.

"That would be without any reference whatsoever to other income," he added.

Fletcher presented figures to show that supplanting the flat 13¾ per cent corporation income tax with a graduated scale ranging from 10 per cent on the first $2,000 to maximum of 17½ per cent on all income over $1,000,000 would increase the tax load of class 1 railroads by 24.5 per cent.

G. O. P. Leaders Consider Borah as Candidate; Country Not Ready Yet to Go Reactionary.

By Raymond Clapper

HERE'S a smart idea that some Republicans are mulling over among themselves:

Bring Borah out as the Republican hope for 1936.

Some think Borah would be an ideal candidate. Others think that at any rate he could perform a useful party service at the moment by pushing Herbert Hoover into the background and giving the party a more progressive aspect.

While the idea of Borah for President was suggested at the Cleveland Republican conference, it has been discussed also by representative party leaders who are in a position to do more about it than the Cleveland rally audience.

Senator Borah has been increasingly active. In his recent radio address on the Constitution he delivered the most effective answer to Mr. Roosevelt on the Supreme Court issue. He is deeply stirred by the issues now shaping up. Some time ago he planned to make a series of speeches across the country. That has been interfered with by the delay in the adjournment of Congress. It still is possible that he will take the stump in the fall, although he would not wish to be put in the light of doing anything of that kind as an offset to the President's transcontinental tour.

Borah still believes that the party must be thoroughly reorganized. While he is convinced that the country is rapidly losing confidence in President Roosevelt, he does not believe this means any return of confidence in the former leaders of the party. The Hoover regime and the party leaders associated with it must go, in his opinion. He has said that many times.

What makes Borah's position especially strong is that he is one recognized figure in the party who commands a national audience, particularly among Progressives.

Yet at the moment, on the issue of the Constitution, his position is much the same as that of the conservative Republicans. It makes him the best bridge between the two wings of the party. Were he younger, his nomination would be inevitable. That he is even considered as a possibility now is a testimonial to his strength as a potential candidate.

In any event, there is the possibility that he will become the dominant national voice of the party. In a role similar to that of Bryan in the earlier history of the Democratic party, he might hold a veto power and exert great influence on the candidate and the platform.

While the first impulse of Republican leaders, when they noticed the decline of the New Deal's popularity, was to swing abruptly back to a conservative position, many feel that this misjudges the real temper of the country. Those who feel this way reason that the disappointment is with Mr. Roosevelt and that it does not mean that the country is ready again to go reactionary.

Although Mr. Roosevelt was extremely anxious to take the lead in taxes aimed at redistributing wealth, the proposal has had an unexpected effect.

Regular Republicans, like Senator Vandenberg, and Progressives, like Senator La Follette, demanded tax increases on medium-sized incomes for the purpose of raising more revenue. Emphasis was laid on the trifling amount of revenue that could be squeezed out of the very rich.

The result of all of this has been to focus attention sharply on the painful fact that some time the taxpayers will have to pay the New Deal bill. For the first time the average man is being made acutely aware of the fact that the tax collector is on the way, that out of his own pocket will come the money with which to pay the bills now being so casually incurred.

That, plus the fact that many States and localities have raised taxes in the last year, is beginning to work into the public mind and is adding to the restlessness over the Roosevelt program.

The worst of it is that despite all of the heavy expenditure, unemployment does not decline materially. Business has shown some general improvement but the progress is not striking enough to win any credit for New Deal measures. On the contrary, the recovery is so slow that it can scarcely be attributed to anything except normal recuperation. In fact, many critics of the Administration say that the Administration's policies are retarding recovery instead of helping it.

Republicans are having some trouble over their proposed Mountain States conference. The original proposal came from Ernest Bamberger, Utah Republican national committeeman. He suggested meeting at Salt Lake City. Since then a suggestion has been advanced to meet in Denver. Former Senator Lawrence Phipps, now Colorado Republican national committeeman, is supposed to be interested and willing to provide funds for the conference.

Farmers are expected to produce 700,000,000 bushels of wheat this year as compared with less than 500,000,000 last year. Still the AAA raises benefit payments by 4 cents a bushel, boosting the total benefit payments to 33 cents, as compared with 28 cents in 1933.

The reason given at AAA for boosting the farm dole instead of reducing it in view of the larger amount of wheat farmers will have to sell is that, "We have the money."

In other words the 30 cents a bushel processing tax provides more than enough to pay the 29-cent benefit payment in effect last year. So they've cut a melon and declared an extra dividend for the farmers. These scarcity economics surely are confusing.

But Senator Tydings, a few hours later, introduced a faint touch of originality into the series by declaring that Secretary Ickes "gave interviews to the newspapers which did not reflect the facts."

In addressing State works administrators, President Roosevelt told them that it was a simple problem in arithmetic to figure that the Administration could not spend more than $1,140 per man.

The problem may have been simple arithmetic but it took from last winter until a few weeks ago to work it out. They had to use long division.

House Propels TVA Proposals To a Showdown

Amendment to Increase Dam-Building Wins; Test Vote Today.

By the Associated Press.

The House drove Tennessee Valley Authority legislation to the testing point of Administration strength yesterday and then delayed a show-down until today.

Republicans and anti-TVA Democrats were lining up for an attempt to keep the measure in the restrictive form unacceptable to the White House. But they faced a strong element battling to erase some of the sections frowned on by President Roosevelt.

The House did approve one amendment, however, that carried virtually the same language of the TVA bill that whipped through the Senate weeks ago under an Administration label.

Construction Clause Wins.

Submitted by Representative Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, champion of the Administration fight on the House measure, it would allow construction of TVA dams even though they had not been recommended by the Army engineers in a report to Congress in 1930.

Hill said the engineers' report was based on prospects of constructing low-navigation dams before TVA embarked on a program of high dams for navigation, flood control and power.

It was accepted, 138 to 55, after a protest from Representative McLean (Republican), of New Jersey, that the House Military Committee had decided TVA should be governed by the engineers' report in an effort to bind the agency "to some orderly procedure."

At the demand of Representative Buchanan (Democrat), of Texas, a provision was deleted from the bill that would have allowed TVA to experiment in the destruction of noxious weeds and plants injurious to agriculture.

McSwain Sounds Warning.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, saying he still was firmly for the Military Committee bill, urged the House to be "careful not to trespass beyond the limitations of the Constitution."

Describing TVA as benefiting "all the American people," Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, said that without the amendments sought by the Administration, the bill might as well be killed and the $100,000,000 invested in TVA be allowed "to wash down the river."

Lashing both at the House measure and the Senate-Administration TVA amendments, Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, dubbed the legislation "frivolous, false, flimsy and fraudulent, unwise, unsound and unconstitutional."

He said TVA had shown its "black, dirty hands" by attempting to prevent the Aluminum Co. of America from building dams on the Little Tennessee River by purchasing small tracts in a proposed reservoir area.

McLean termed TVA the biggest log-rolling case that had come before Congress in his memory.

"Dam for Every Town," He Says.

"It's a dam for every town, a town for every dam, and everybody get a dam as quickly as they could," he said.

Representative Wilcox (Democrat), Florida, said that althuogh TVA officials have been harrassed, they still have been able to reduce power rates in the Tennessee Valley territory by 50 per cent, and have set aside the legal rate of 5 per cent of gross receipts, and an additional 7 per cent, for the payment of taxes.

Brought out by the military committee after a protracted fight, the House TVA bill contains three major provisions which the Administration wants deleted.

Those would place TVA expenditures completely under the supervision of the general accounting office, forbid sales of power and agricultural chemicals below costs of production after July 1, 1937, and prevent TVA's constructing power transmission lines substantially paralleling existing ones.

Roosevelt Theories Branded Blind Hysteria by Economist

Hecklers Arise at Institute to Defend Recovery Policies.

D. Holt, the "baby" Democratic member of the Senate from West Virginia, was scheduled for that task, members of the audience leaped angrily and savagely on Lloyd.

Rabbi Jacob H. Caplin, of Miami, Fla., demanded to know what of it, even if some of the New Deal measures did violate the Constitution. Was not the Sabbath made for man and not man for the Sabbath, asked the rabbi. Therefore, was not the Constitution made for us and not the people of the country to serve the Constitution?

Lloyd agreed and asserted he had no objection to any open and above-board plan for changing the Constitution. He insisted he objected to changing the country's basic law by indirection and without referring the subject specifically to the people.

Prof. James Curtis Ballagh, formerly of the University of Pennsylvania, was another heckler, denouncing wholesale attacks on the New Deal. He thought the New Deal in many aspects was "a great gamble," regarded the AAA as a "great mistake" but there was much in the Roosevelt program that could be lauded, as the CCC and PWA. No administration since that of Woodrow Wilson has accomplished as much, he asserted.

Harold S. Buttenheim, editor of the magazine American City, insisted that the New Deal foes "give us something constructive" while other questioners struck the same note, one asking what the Liberty League proposed as an alternative program and whom it would support for the presidency.

No Plan, He Charges.

So the controversy from the floor ran, with Lloyd remaining smiling and good-natured and now and then scoring on his hecklers. When chided for being nothing but a destructive critic, he reminded his audience that all great issues had been negative ones, such as no taxation without representation, no slavery, no liquor and later no prohibition.

But even in American Liberty League ranks there appears a lack of unanimity of approach in attacking the New Deal. Whereas Lloyd attributed many of the New Deal measures to a subtle Fabian plot to foist socialism on the country, Dr. Carothers saw an absence of any plan or plot in the Roosevelt program.

"An impartial and cool-headed analysis of governmental policy in the last two years will disclose no plot, no economic planning of a new order, no program of radical reconstruction of our economic system," he asserted, adding it was nothing but self-contradictory, unplanned and hysterical experiments.

He divided the Roosevelt measures into three groups: Those aimed at recovery, those at relief and those at reform. A few measures, such as the silver purchase policy, are "merely a surrender to special interests," but most fall into one of the three general classes.

The Lehigh economist said he was not concerned in his paper with either the relief or reform measures, except he wished to say that "the relief measures have been necessary and unavoidable," even though they have in some degree been "unscientific, wasteful, extravagant and tainted with political motive."

"The reform measures," he added, "have been hastily drawn and arbitrarily passed and not one has been free from serious error. They have discouraged enterprise and retarded recovery. But it must be admitted that they were aimed at definite evils. It would have been wiser to postpone them, but here again it might be conceded that some reform measures were inevitable."

Condemns Entire Program.

As an economist, however, he said, "I reject and condemn the entire recovery program," regarding it as "unsound in principle, impractical in operation and harmful in result," consisting of a "bewildering mass of experimental measures forced on the country by arbitrary political action in defiance of economic science and the advice of competent authority."

Getting down to specific criticism of such measures as NRA, AAA, PWA and the monetary experimentation, Carothers asserted that in the first place the program was founded on "the profound error that artificial raising of wages in depression promotes prosperity," whereas in truth a major factor in prolonging depression is the continuance of high wages and high salaries in certain industrial lines."

He regarded as the second fundamental error the belief that restriction of production increases prices and promotes recovery, whereas actually "recovery comes from increased consumption due to reduced costs, this increase in consumption encouraging production and employment." The third error, he said, is the theory that "private enterprise can be forced to an artificial activity by squandering public funds in unnecessary public works," whereas "such enterprises discourage private enterprise and create fiscal problems that frighten private investment."

Discusses Currency Issue.

Finally the program was in error when it was believed that debasement of the currency automatically would raise prices and stimulate foreign trade. Actually, he continued, debasement of the coinage "operates to raise prices only when conditions are favorable and normally only after months or years have elapsed, while the stimulation for foreign trade is merely temporary and in the long run tends to discourage both imports and exports and to retard recovery."

"The consequences of these errors are now apparent," he asserted. "Recovery has been definitely retarded. Production has been restricted. Unemployment has grown worse. The population on relief has grown to twenty-two and one-half millions, one in every six of the population. The debt of the Government has increased by eight billion dollars, with many more billions already appropriated for the future.

"The South has lost a large part of the cotton market on which the prosperity of both the South and the Nation depends. Nearly a billion dollars has been collected in taxes on the bread and meat and clothes of the people to pay a cash dole to farmers for destroying food and textiles in a hungry world, and at the present time the Government is guilty of the vicious and inexcusable blunder of taxing the bread of the people to pay this same cash dole to farmers for raising all the wheat they can. We are already importing food from foreign countries.

"Our monetary system has become an indescribable and unnamable mixture of debased gold coin, debased silver coin and paper, and every day a useless and dangerous mass of dead silver is pumped into the vaults, further diluting and adulterating the mixture behind the irredeemable paper that we use. The banks have been forced to absorb nearly $15,000,000,000 of Gobernment bonds. They are ceasing to be providers of credit for private enterprise and becoming agencies for Government spending.

"The materials for a disastrous inflation of currency and credit have been built up, and no one knows when these inflammable materials will be set ablaze. Our currency measures have disorganized foreign trade, cruelly embarrassed the gold standard countries of Europe, deepened the misery of China, and retarded recovery the world over.

"This orgy of manipulation and experiment and waste has gone under the euphemistic title of economic planning. I have no quarrel with economic planning. What I deplore is that we have had no economic planning. What we have had is guesswork, and blind experiment, and vacillating and mutually destructive economic policies."

Treasure Hunters Towed Into Port

By the Associated Press.

Batabano, Cuba, July 9.—Four Americans and one Canadian were towed into this south coast sponge-fishing village aboard their small ketch Casarco today, seasick and near exhaustion after drifting helplessly nine days in the open sea in a futile search for buried treasure.

Visibly worn from their long battle with the elements, the five were picked up the day before yesterday off Cape Corrientes by the Cuban gunboat Santa Clara, towed to the Isle of Pines and thence brought here.

The 50-foot ketch, skippered by M. C. Rice, of Toronto, sailed out of Havana Harbor June 28 bound for an unannounced point in the Pacific Ocean, where Rice hoped to dig up buried treasure.

With Rice were Elbert James, of Daytona Beach, Fla.; Mrs. Rice and her sons, Harry, 12, and Derek, 14. James was employed as crew man at Miami. The purpose of the cruise was not revealed to him.

Potato Control Bill Action Is Due Today

Representative Warren (Democrat), North Carolina, said he was informed yesterday by Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee, that the committee will meet today to take final action on the Warren potato control bill, according to the Associated Press.

The Senate Agriculture Committee was expected later in the week to act on a companion bill introduced by Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina. The proposed legislation would classify potatoes as a basic commodity and levy a tax of 75 cents a hundred pounds on potatoes sold in excess of sales quotas.

A digging and shipping strike among growers in the Eastern Shore of Virginia brought pressure for action on the bills.

Brewster Calls Corcoran Liar In Lobby Quiz

Hearing in Bedlam as Two Principals Testify on 'Threat' Over Vote.

a great mistake if I did not vote for the death sentence.

"Corcoran interrupted him: 'Let me speak with brutal bluntness. If you do not vote for the death sentence I shall find it necessary to stop construction on the Passamaquoddy Dam.'"

He said Gruening interrupted with: "I think you should do it on your own," and later Corcoran repeated "that if I did not vote for the measure he would find it necessary to 'stop Quoddy.'"

A tattoo of questioning by committee members brought out sidelights on Brewster's relations with Corcoran, both on the Passamaderstandings as to our relations on 'Quoddy' in the future.

"If, as you say, you are not a free man politically, and must take power company support into your calculations, then you'll understand perfectly that from now on you can't expect me to trust you to protect 'Quoddy' or trust your assurances that we'll get that Maine power authority out of the Maine Legislature."

Corcoran said Brewster replied: "I understand. It's well to get that clarified."

Then, Corcoran testified, Brewster turned to Gruening and said: "Would it be satisfactory if I went back to the hotel and didn't vote at all?"

It was at this point Brewster interrupted with his charge that Corcoran lied.

While O'Connor pounded for order, the Maine Representative turned to Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., and said: "There's a limit!"

Continues Story.

Disregarding the interruption, the witness went on with his story.

Earlier, Corcoran and Brewster had explained that Dr. Gruening, former editor of The Nation and editor-in-chief of the Portland Evening News of Portland, Me., from 1927 to 1932, was a mutual acquaintance. It was Gruening who first introduced him to Brewster, before the latter came to Congress, Corcoran testified.

Gruening and the Portland Evening News had been Brewster's chief supporters in the latter's political campaign against the Insull interests in Maine.

And it was Gruening, according to Corcoran, who assured him "that Mr. Brewster could be relied upon more than anyone else to help the President in his power program."

"As I met Mr. Brewster from time to time after Mr. Brewster came to Congress, Mr. Brewster told me the same thing," he said.

Brewster had told the committee he conferred many times with Corcoran, who was handling the legal phase of the $38,000,000 Passamaquoddy project. At some of these conferences, he said, the "death sentence" section of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill also had been discussed. Although Brewster also attended conferences of liberal Democrats and Republicans who favored the "death sentence," he denied he had committed himself to vote for it.

Query by Cox.

Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat), Georgia, asked him how long he was uncertain about how he would vote.

"Up until the time he threatened me," Brewster replied, "then my mind was instantly clarified and there was no doubt of what I would do."

Brewster said on one occasion, while he was in Bangor, Maine, Corcoran phoned him from Washington, requesting that he sign a letter to other Congressmen, inclosing a copy of a speech made by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, advancing constitutional arguments for the "death sentence."

Brewster said he had no particular objections to the Borah letter, but he did not feel at the time he could sponsor it.

Corcoran later gave a different version. He said Brewster objected to sending out the letter because the name of Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, appeared in a colloquy with Borah.

According to Corcoran, Brewster said he "would prefer not to sign anything which might reflect on the ability of Senator Hastings, because Senator Hastings, as Republican campaign manager, might interfere with Mr. Brewster's hopes to obtain Republican campaign funds" for the 1936 election.

Request to White.

Brewster told the committee that at another time Corcoran requested him to ask Senator Wallace H. White, jr. (Republican), Maine, that he either vote for the "death sentence" proviso or not vote at all on the question. He said he thought this a legitimate request and had carried the message to White. White voted against the "death sentence" section.

Here again, Corcoran gave a different account. Entirely unsolicited, he said, Brewster went to Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, while Wheeler was conducting Senate hearings on the holding company bill, and said he "could persuade Senator White to support the President on the bill."

At another time, Corcoran said Brewster advised him "that Senator White was under political obligations to Mr. Brewster" and dependent upon his support for re-election.

On the day of the teller vote on the "death sentence," Corcoran said, he met Dr. Gruening in Statuary Hall at 1:40 p. m. The vote was to come between 2 and 2:30 p. m. He said Brewster arrived at 2 minutes of 2.

Corcoran testified that Brewster advised them he not only was not going to speak for the "death sentence," but also was not going to vote for it.

Tells of Argument.

"Dr. Gruening argued with him while I stood by saying nothing," Corcoran continued. "Dr. Gruening's argument in substance was that to refuse to vote for the Senate amendments would run contrary not only to the specific expectations Mr. Brewster had given as to his action on the bill, but was directly contrary to what Mr. Brewster had always agreed upon with Dr. Gruening as fundamental philosophy on the power issue."

Corcoran said Brewster replied in substance:

"Yes, I understand everything you say, but since my visit to Maine I know that my political situation is so delicate that I simply can not vote for this death sentence unless some such arrangement as I told you about, Earnest, can be made."

Corcoran said he was advised by Dr. Gruening that this portion of the conversation related to an earlier inquiry by Brewster "whether he would have Administration assurances that he would receive as many Democratic 'liberal' votes as he might need in the next election to offset conservative Republican votes he might lose by support of Administration policies."

Virtually all of his activities at the Capitol in connection with the Wheeler-Rayburn bill were carried out under "instructions" from Senator Wheeler, Representative Rayburn and other members, Corcoran told the committee.

him the abolition of utility holding companies was doomed to defeat and suggested that he agree to a compromise.

On occasion, one leader said, the House was forced to "lose face" because the President gave way to the Senate.

Chairmen at Conference.

Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina), ways and means, wealth taxes, alcohol control, liquor taxes; Summers (Democrat), Texas, judiciary, tax exempt securities, Constitutional amendment, liquor control; Rayburn (Democrat), Texas), interstate commerce, bus regulation, food and drug; Jones (Democrat), Texas, agriculture, Bankhead tenant farmer; Buchanan (Democrat), Texas), appropriations, deficiency appropriations; Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, banking, elimination of the gold clause in Government contracts; McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, foreign affairs, several minor measures.

Representative Drewry (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee, also was asked because of a survey he instituted recently through House members in an attempt to determine whether the President was gaining or losing popularity in the 435 congressional districts.

O'Connor Attends.

Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, also on the list, chairman of the unofficial House Democratic steering committee; Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, of the Rules Committee; Representative Taylor, of Colorado, acting Democratic floor leader; Representative Boland, of Pennsylvania, Democratic whip, and Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Naval Affairs Committee, also were invited.

sections were around Binghamton and Hornell, close to the Pennsylvania border, and in the vicinity of Watkins Glen, 60 miles northwestward in the heart of the famous Finger Lakes district.

More than 1,500 were receiving aid in Binghamton, while 1,000 Hornell refugees were being cared for in public buildings, private homes and at the transient bureau.

Gus G. Meyer, American Red Cross field worker, termed Hornell's flood a "major disaster."

Several hundred were temporarily homeless at Watkins Glen, where the State park was so badly damaged that it may be closed for the season.

Bath, in Steuben County, remained without gas or electric service for a second day.

Electric service at Hornell was restored before nightfall Monday in most sections of the city.

The State put 25,000 relief workers and 1,500 CCC youths to work in the flood areas, and National Guardsmen patroled streets in some regions.

Telephonic communication was being restored slowly, highways were gradually being reopened and railroad crews worked feverishly to repair washed-out roadbeds.

By the Associated Press.

Glasgow, Mont., July 9.—Two thousand homeless sought refuge tonight from the desolation wrought in the Fort Peck dam area last night by tornadoes which lashed little "pasteboard towns," killed two persons, injured 13 seriously and put the mushroom villages in shambles.

The storm-struck families, most of them depending on the Fort Peck dam construction for a livelihood, scratched in mud and muck to find solid timbers and roofing and attempted to patch together temporary shanties.

Harold Bartholomew, 36, died in a Government hospital at Fort Peck after he was struck by a flying timber when he attempted to aid stricken neighbors. Mrs. Clifford Dashner, of Wheeler, was crushed to death in her crumpled home.

Rescue workers from Glasgow and unharmed citizens near the construction area plodded through mud at Wheeler and Fort Peck to rehabilitate the flimsy towns.

From 500 to 600 women and children hovered around Fort Peck, anxiously awaiting food, shelter and clothing.

The construction camps were battered by two storms, first a flood that sent 400 scurrying from Wheeler to the highlands, and then the terrific tornado which broke last night.

Airplanes were dispatched over the stricken area late today to survey wreckage, the flood situation and the $72,000,000 dam site.

It was believed sufficient assistance was available locally to forestall any appeal to the American Red Cross.

PWA Officials Told to Expend Funds in Year

ects costing $25,000 or more should come under the PWA.

"With the Federal grant of 45 per cent of the total cost and money to be had from the PWA revolving fund at 4 per cent and in the bond markets, at even lower rates for good security, there is no reason why there should not be a large volume of useful construction under this program," he said.

Asks Co-operation.

The President urged close co-operation with local officials and with other Government works program officials.

"I am very sure," he concluded, "that the fine spirit the PWA has shown in the past and the very great success it has had in carrying out what it has undertaken—with efficiency and very definitely with honesty—is going to continue throughout the coming year."

Charging that the James B. McCary Co., Atlanta engineers, had distributed a circular offering to obtain PWA loans and grants, Secretary Ickes declared that there was no need to employ "any lawyer, engineer, agent or lobbyist in order to obtain consideration of a public work project."

Ickes announced the start of two additional housing projects, one in Cleveland to cost $3,000,000, and one in Atlantic City to cost $1,300,000. Fifty PWA housing projects have been approved, but announcement of their location is being withheld pending acquisition of land.

In Brother's Steps, Buddy Baer to Wed

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, July 9.—Buddy Baer, 20, following again in the footsteps of his more famous brother, Max, former heavyweight boxing champion, said today he would be married next month, but he would not give the name of his intended bride.

Buddy is here for a fight tomorrow night.

He said the intended bride is a Chicago girl, beautiful, but not the "hi-di-ho" type.

"She's a home loving gal," Buddy said, "quiet and cultured. She's a lot like Max's wife (the former Mary Ellen Sullivan, of Washington and Ithaca, N. Y.), domestic, talented and sensible. Maybe she's too good for a guy who makes his living with his fists, but I'm not always going to be in the ring and that's one reason why she consented to be my wife."

"Oddly Enough"

IF THERE are stranger things in Washington than the rumblings from Capitol Hill we want to hear about them. Do you know of any horses that sing "Mother Machree" . . . cows with three heads . . . or apple trees that bear strawberries?

attorney for contempt because he didn't appear in a case that wasn't on the docket. He is always haranguing the mob from the bench. He has been bringing American justice into disrepute in the Virgin Islands."

Told of Ickes' statement, Judge Wilson said he did not even want to hear about it and had no comment to make.

Yates on Stand.

The morning hearing before the committee went along peacefully enough. Yates, still wearing a bandage over his left eye—he has been wearing it since he and Robert S. Allen, columnist, exchanged blows on the opening day of the hearing—continued his recital of alleged misconduct.

As the afternoon session opened, Tydings announced it would be necessary for everyone except Yates and E. W. Martin, colored, who described himself as "representing fraternal organizations," to leave the room.

Forty minutes later the doors were opened. Tydings rapped for order and said.

"Just prior to the opening of this hearing one of the important witnesses was drawn into a fight. It has come to the attention of this committee, on what seems to be good authority, that some witnesses have been intimidated. We would like to serve notice that this committee has the power to protect witnesses.

"If there are any more reports of intimidation, the hearing will be suspended and we shall go into them."

Collins jumped to his feet and declared there "had been no intimidation from the Interior Department and the department will co-operate to prevent any intimidation."

"The Interior Department is a very big department and it has many branches," Tydings replied. "I hope that all sections of it will co-operate."

At this point a red-haired young man arose and declared he wished to present some affidavits.

"Who are you?" demanded Tydings.

"My name is Robinson," was the reply. "I am a Government attorney. I represent the Interior Department."

He advanced to the committee table and handed a folder to Tydings. Tydings slammed in on the table.

"I wonder why the Secretary of the Interior does not present his case and not give interviews to the papers which, to say the least, do not reflect the facts brought out here."

Senator Angry.

The Senator's prominent chin was quivering with anger.

Afterward Tydings said he would not even look at the Interior Department affidavits.

"People in Washington can come here and testify and answer questions," he said.

Martin after the hearing professed not to have the slightest idea of why he was invited to attend the executive meeting of the committee or what went on in the meeting.

Yates' testimony concerned alleged small thefts of public works materials in the Virgin Islands, demonstrations on the islands; the conduct of Michael J. Nolan, former New York police lieutenant and later in charge of the island police, and the riot that occurred the night Yates left the islands after being dismissed.

He will continue on the stand today.

More Soldiers Called in Rome By Royal Edict

Official Newspaper Urges Britain Recognize Italy's Rights.

By the United Press.

Rome, July 9.—Italy rushed preparations for war with Ethiopia today with a royal decree, published in the official gazette, calling to the colors all noncommissioned officers and soldiers classified as specialists or technicians belonging to the classes of 1909 and 1910.

Coinciding with diplomatic activity at London, Geneva and Scheveningen, the Giornale D'Italia, official organ, published a first-page editorial three columns wide calling upon Britain "to recognize Italy's right to a place in the sun if it is true she is working for the maintenance of peace."

League Dispute Recalled.

On the eve of a British cabinet meeting to consider the Italo-Abyssinian war threat and two days before debate on the problem in the House of Commons, Giornale D'Italia reminded Britain that:

Britain opposed Ethiopia's entry to the League of Nations in 1923 on the grounds it was an indignity and now supports her despite unchanged conditions.

Britain's possessions are rich and fertile, greater than Italy's, which are almost sterile and difficult to work.

The editorial affirmed advisability of Italian influence in Ethiopia as a neighbor to British East Africa. It mentioned Italian contributions, materially and morally, to British conquest in Africa.

Giornale D'Italia deprecates destruction of Stresa solidarity, saying it would mean the death of the League of Nations.

"If Britain should be compelled to enter another war she must rely on the energies of other peoples than her own brave nationals," the newspaper said. "In Geneva committees and sub-committees she would find nothing."

Conciliation Efforts Fail.

The collapse of conciliation efforts at Scheveningen caused no surprise in government circles here. Death of the conference had been expected momentarily for several days. When Italian arbitrators reported Abyssinian efforts to insert the question of frontier limitation into the discussions, Rome hailed the beginning of the end.

Italy remains adamant in her contention the conciliation commissioners were not empowered to discuss frontier political questions. Anyway, officials said, whether Ualual is actually on Ethiopian soil is of secondary importance since Italian soldiers have occupied the region for the last five or six years without protest from Addis Ababa.

Italian troops at Ualual, they said, were attacked by Abyssinians without provocation or justification.

By the United Press.

Scheveningen, Netherlands, July 9.—The Italo-Ethiopian commission of conciliation broke up in an exchange of harsh words tonight, throwing the war threat back to the League of Nations Council and definitely endangering Italian membership in the league.

The commissioners packed their bags and left in a huff after the Italian delegates accused Gaston Jeze, Ethiopian legal adviser, of sabotaging the conference.

They said he insisted on discussing frontier problems in order to deadlock the conference, knowing Italy had produced important documents making it certain Ethiopia would lose her case.

Conference Breaks Down.

Breakdown of the conference meant its death. Time for its conciliation efforts was limited to July 25. After then the dispute must be submitted to arbitration. And such a move by the League Council, it was feared, would force Italy's resignation.

Before the breakup the Italians rejected Jeze's suggestion to appoint a fifth member to the commission, declaring such a move outside its power.

Jeze issued a statement, confirming an absolute deadlock over his contention he should be allowed to give opinions regarding frontier problems. Against the other members the Italians insisted only actual frontier incidents could be considered.

They said the issues which deadlocked the meeting must be settled by the league. Then they left for Rome while other commissioners departed for Geneva and Paris. Minutes of the meeting and Italian and Ethiopian statements were forwarded to Geneva.

During the meeting the Italians stubbornly refused to permit Jeze to finish a speech which they insisted was outside the scope of the negotiations. He attempted to say Ualual, where Italian and Abyssinian troops clashed, is on Ethiopian soil. His remarks, the Italians said, dealt with frontier problems, not actual incidents. So they quit.

Fatal Duel Climaxes Farmers' Hog Feud

Freeport, Ill., July 9 (AP).—Shooting at a range of about 10 yards, Frank Williams, 68, and John Linton, 70, living on adjoining farms near Shannon, fought a pistol duel today in which Williams fired a fatal bullet into his own head after seriously wounding Linton.

Deputy sheriffs who investigated the shooting said the two had been enemies for more than a year since Williams caused Linton's arrest after the latter's hogs had strayed across the boundary lines. Williams, they said, fired the first shot, Linton rushing to his home to get a weapon to return the fire.

Paper's Editor Writes 'Obit,' Then Kills Self

Chattanooga Times Chief Writes He Was Too Ill to Work Longer.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 9 (AP).—Richard Earl Walker, editor of the Chattanooga Times, was found dead in his office this afternoon from a bullet wound in the head which Police Commissioner Eugene Bryan said was self-inflicted.

He was slumped in his chair in front of his typewriter on which he had written a note, timed at 11:30 a. m., saying that he had been in failing health for two and a half years. He also had typewritten material for his own obituary.

His body was found at 3:30 p. m. (central standard time) by a colored employe who brought in some exchange newspapers. The employe summoned help. Adolph Shelby Ochs, general manager, and W. G. Foster, managing editor, responded from Ochs' adjoining offices.

The editorial writer's head was bandaged and an empty bottle labeled "Chloroform" was on his desk. He had a .32-caliber revolver in his right hand, Ochs said. The single shot entered his right temple.

Dr. Edward Newell said he believed Walker had been dead about two hours. None of the Times' employes heard the shot. Executives of the paper explained that it appeared likely that it was fired during the lunch hour.

In Walker's typewriter was the following note, addressed to "Whom it may concern:"

"I was born on July 28, 1884. My parents were James J. and Mrs. Martha L. (Meisenheimer) Walker.

"My birthplace was Rowan County, N. C. I was educated at Wake Forest College, Wake Forest, N. C. There I obtained my B. A. degree in 1909, studied law and obtained license to practice in North Carolina in the fall of 1912. In the spring of 1913 I received from Wake Forest my A. B. degree. I am survived by my mother, Mrs. S. E. Simmerson, who has been an inmate of Lyons View since Feb. 2, 1933, and my wife, Mrs. Mae Lucille Walker. I have been in failing health for two and a half years. I am going because I am no longer able to work."

Walker came to the Times January 5, 1925, from the Roanoke (Va.) World News as associate editor.

Walker also had written and sealed letters to Adolph Shelby Ochs, his wife, Judge Will Cummings and other friends and associates.

Widow Gets Bulk Of Hitz Estate

Mrs. Esther Porter Hitz, widow of associate Justice William Hitz, of the District Court of Appeals, was named as the principal beneficiary of his estate, it was disclosed yesterday when his will was filed in the District Supreme Court. Because the will was not accompanied by a petition for probate there was no estimation of the value of the estate, although Justice Hitz was known to be financially independent.

The will directs that Mrs. Hitz is to have the entire income from the estate, which is to be held in trust by the American Security & Trust Co., for life. Upon her death, her sons, William and Frederick Hitz, are to receive the estate.

Death Claims Aged Daughter Of Composer

Mrs. Marian Foster Welch Inspired Father to Write Famous Song.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 9.—The gentle little old woman who in her childhood inspired her famous father, Stephen Collins Foster, to write "Under the Willows She's Sleeping," died today.

Mrs. Marian Foster Welch, only child of the immortal composer, succumbed to a heart attack in the Foster Memorial Home to which she came 20 years ago. She was 84.

Seventy-odd years ago when the family lived in what is now Pittsburgh's Northside, Foster strolled in the garden one day.

He saw little Marian sleeping under a great willow tree and touched by the picture went to the house and composed the song. When it was finished he lifted the child in his arms and carried her to the music room to hear it first.

Mrs. Welch had been ill for some time, but forbade her physician to do anything to prolong her life, saying she deplored inactivity and helplessness away from her beloved music.

The daughter of the composer of "Old Folks at Home" had been a musician and teacher all her life. Until a few months ago she presided over the memorial home, playing frequently with a touch, firm and sure, despite her years.

She wrote many compositions, but published only one, "Beautiful Dreamer," a schottische, completed when she was 12 years old and named for the last composition of the famous Foster. He died when Marian was 13.

Casey Is Named GivenSuccessor As D. C. Judge

Miss Raedy Nominated for Municipal Bench; Aukum, Clayton Reappointed.

A slender, soft-spoken man, his 67 years well hidden behind sharp, blue eyes and a cheerful smile, sat alone in his office at Police Court yesterday. Judge Ralph Given was looking toward the end of long judicial service—42 years as clerk, prosecutor and judge.

A few hours earlier, President Roosevelt, in a surprise announcement, named Walter J. Casey, local attorney, as Judge Given's successor on the Police Court bench. Since last December, when his 6-year term expired, Judge Given has been waiting.

"I'll either be reappointed or out of a job," he once said.

At the same time yesterday, the President announced appointment of Miss Ellen Kathryn Raedy, daughter of a retired police captain, to succeed Municipal Court Judge Mary O'Toole, whose term expired more than a year ago. Miss Raedy and Judge O'Toole are the only women who have received Municipal Court judgeships in the District.

Two other Municipal Court judges —Judge George C. Aukum, "father" of the Municipal bench, and Judge Nathan Cayton, youngest member of the court—were reappointed. The appointments carry four-year terms.

President Roosevelt's nominations, recommended by Attorney General Cummings, were sent to the Senate for confirmation. It is expected that the appointments will be confirmed immediately.

Selection of Miss Raedy and Casey startled Washington legal circles. In recent discussions of probable candidates, Casey had not been mentioned. Miss Raedy, widely known and respected by the local law profession, loomed as a prospect. Her sudden appointment, however, was a surprise.

Casey came to Washington from Boston, Mass. He is a graduate of Georgetown Law School, class of 1924. A year later he was admitted to the District of Columbia bar and opened his practice in 1926.

During his legal training here, Casey served as secretary to three successive Directors of the Mint—Raymond T. Baker, Frank Scoley and Robert Grant. In 1934, he was in charge of liquidation of the trust department of the District National Bank. Earlier this year, he became associated with the law firm of Henry I Quinn and Austin F. Canfield, with offices in the Woodward Building.

Casey was born in Haverhill, Mass. He is 39 years old, and will be the youngest Police Court judge. He lives at 1026 Sixteenth street northwest and is a member of the American Legion and Delta Theta Phi legal fraternity. He is a bachelor.

Miss Raedy is a native Washingtonian. She is a graduate of District public schools and received her legal training at the National University Law School. Graduating in 1928, she was admitted to the bar in the same year and entered practice with her brother, Michael L. Raedy in the Mills Building.

"That's one question a lady is not required to answer," she said.

She lives with her family at 1407 Delafield place northwest. Her father, Michael Raedy, was captain of the old Eighth Police Precinct until his retirement several years ago.

Miss Raedy is tall, slender and attractive. She has brown, bobbed hair and brown eyes. She is a member of the Women's Bar Association and Kappa Beta Pi, International Women's Legal Sorority.

Aukum Instituted Many Changes.

Unlike Miss Raedy and Casey, who are Democrats, Judges Aukum and Cayton are classed as Republicans. Judge Aukum's long judicial service won for him the title of "father" of Municipal Court. He instituted many practical changes. He was appointed by Theodore Roosevelt. Cayton, 36, was appointed by President Coolidge.

When word of Casey's appointment reached Police Court yesterday, Judge Given was swamped with telephone and personal messages. He left the bench of D. C. Court at noon and retired to his chamber. Asked for a statement, he smiled philosophically.

"I have devoted my best years to service in Police Court," he said. "I am still young and active. I have enjoyed my service here. But now——".

Outside his office door, lawyers, bondsmen and associates gathered. They appeared stunned by the sudden turn of events. Judge Givens' reappointment had been backed by the District and American Bar Associations. The Policeman's Association voted unanimously for his retention.

Given Started as Clerk.

At the age of 18, Judge Given first took up duties at Police Court. He started as a clerk in the assistant district attorney's office. In 1904 he was placed in charge of all criminal prosecutions as Government attorney. In 1928, under President Hoover, he was appointed judge.

Judge O'Toole, known as one of the most beloved figures in the local judiciary, has recently been in ill helath. She was appointed to Municipal Court by President Harding in 1921—the first woman to sit on the bench.

O'Connor Urges Speed On Bank Bill Decision

By the Associated Press.

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, reported to President Roosevelt yesterday a need for prompt action on the banking measure "to clear the atmosphere."

"It is vital that business and the Government know as soon as possible," O'Connor said, "what the new banking law will be and what regulations are necessary."

The legislation, already passed by the House, is before the Senate, with an early vote in prospect.

Wife of Waley Goes On Trial For Kidnaping

Helped Conceive, Execute Weyerhaeuser Crime, U. S. Contends.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., July 9.—The Government opened its fight to convict blue-eyed Margaret Waley of the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping today by charging she participated in the plot from its inception.

United States Attorney Owen P. Hughes declared in an opening statement that the blonde defendant even was nearby when the child's lumber-wealthy family paid $200,000 ransom. Defense attorneys have indicated they will attempt to prove to the Federal court jury the young woman knew nothing about the plot until after the boy was abducted.

J. P. Weyerhaeuser, jr., father of the 9-year-old kidnaped boy, was called to the stand early to testify how he paid the ransom by following instructions in the extortion letters.

Ransom Letter Identified.

The father identified the ransom letter, signed "Egoist." He was questioned by J. Charles Dennis, United States District attorney.

"They are the letter and the envelope received Friday night, May 24," Weyerhaeuser said.

The letter revealed George had been kidnaped, and demanded $200,000 ransom. The lad had been missing since he started home from school at noon.

"After receiving the letter what did you do?" Dennis asked.

"Inserted an ad in the papers," said Weyerhaeuser, referring to the "Percy Minnie" advertisements through which the family notified the abductors they were obtaining the ransom money.

The father is one of more than 70 witnesses the Government expected to introduce.

Mrs. Waley, 19-year-old wife of Harmon M. Waley, who pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 45 years on similar charges under the Lindbergh law, leaned forward as Weyerhaeuser testified. Her face was pale.

Attorney Hughes told the jury the Government would prove that Mrs. Waley, her husband, and Williard Dainard, alias Mahan, conceived the plot. Dainard is a fugitive.

The attorney's statement related how the child was kidnaped May 24, chained to a tree, confined in holes, concealed in a Spokane house and driven around the country in a box carried in an automobile.

Later, Hughes declared, Dainard made contact with the father for payment of the ransom, and Mrs. Waley remained at the scene near Tacoma, later driving back to Seattle where she awaited Dainard with the ransom money.

Both the Waleys, Hughes said, objected to Dainard's suggestion that the boy be released at Renton, Wash., saying they would be caught before they could reach Seattle.

The capture of the couple at Salt Lake City—after Mrs. Waley was caught passing a $5 bill from the ransom money—was recalled by Miss Marian Samuels, a floor-walker in a 5-and-10-cent store at Salt Lake.

Dennis questioned Weyerhaeuser at length on the third note, giving final instructions and warning "that there should be no traffic blockade or newspaper publicity for 30 hours"—to be used in counting and examining the ransom money—"or you'll have damned poor results.

"And in accordance with these instructions, I will ask you what you did?" Dennis asked.

"I followed them," Weyerhaeuser said simply.

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Maxine Davis, magazine and feature writer, has gone forth to discover the America of 1935. She is writing of her experiences for The Post. Her fifth article appears today.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 9.—I tapped the political sentiment of the Tennessee mountains unexpectedly this morning.

Very early, about 6:30, on my way here from Asheville, I was midway between Hot Springs, N. C., and Newport, Tenn., two towns named either with irony or insufferable civic pride! Midway between them is very high in the Great Smokies, and seems a long way from anywhere.

And I had a flat tire. How a nail got into the road so far from, apparently, any human habitation will always be to me one of the Great Unsolved Mysteries.

Now, I have never changed a tire and I hadn't planned on it. But I laid the tools on the ground and with ladylike inadequacy began to battle with the jack.

Suddenly, out of the woods came a gentleman. He didn't resemble Sir Galahad. He was long and cadaverous. I am sure his overalls were older than I am. He had a tramplike beard and his tooth was quite yellow. He rambled up beside the car and viewed it impersonally.

"Flat?" he inquired.

I swallowed my notion of an appropriate response.

"Gimme," he said, and went to work on that jack.

Love of humankind swept over me in warm waves. I proceeded to make a little small talk.

"Going to be a beautiful day when the fog clears, don't you think?"

No answer. Well, he was busy unfastening little jiggers.

"Tobacco look pretty good this year?" I tried after he laid all five of them on the road.

No answer.

I stood and watched. My saviour went about his business pretty expertly. But the silence in those majestic hills, with only the sound of a river rushing far below, became oppressive after a bit. I tried again.

"You fellows all Republicans up here?"

He merely squirted tobacco juice toward the river with an expertness that would turn a small boy green with envy.

When the flat tire was being lifted onto the rack, I made one more effort at sociability.

"What do you think of the New Deal?

No answer.

At last the job was done. I thanked him profusely and opened my purse.

Pointedly he ignored that gesture, turned on me with rage shining out of his pale gray eyes, and said:

"Lady, they done changed that Constitution 21 times already an' danged if I think they've ever improved on it."

Jury Inquiry Of Police Court Ordered Here

Indictment of Employe for Embezzling Funds Is Forecast.

The grand jury tomorrow will begin investigating an alleged scandal in the District Police Court, and the prospect is that a court attache will be indicted for embezzlement. He is said to be $1,250 short in his accounts.

The activities of a small group of professional bondsmen also will be investigated.

In some mysterious manner, these bondsmen were able to get back their bond money from the Police Court even when the prisoners they had bonded failed to show up for trial.

The impending investigation by the grand jury was announced yesterday by Henry Schweinhaut, Assistant United States Attorney.

Sherwood Resigns.

At the same time Gus A. Schuldt, presiding judge of the Police Court, announced that Clayton E. Sherwood, financial clerk of the court, had resigned more than a month ago. It had been reported previously that he was merely on leave.

Judge Schuldt announced that Wilmer S. Schantz had been appointed to succeed Sherwood, and that William J. Zepp, a former recording clerk, had been named as Schantz's assistant. Thousands of dollars in fines will pass through the hands of Mr. Schantz daily in Police Court.

The grand jury investigation is the outgrowth of an undercover inquiry by agents of the Department of Justice. These agents made their report to the judges of the Police Court several weeks ago. After studying this report, the judges decided to recommend action by the grand jury.

The first evidence to be presented to the grand jury will concern the alleged shortage in the accounts of the Police Court employe. It is reported that he has made a confession.

More Time Asked.

The conduct of the professional bondsmen may not be investigated for several weeks, the Department of Justice men having asked for more time to submit their findings.

Aside from the alleged irregularities uncovered, the report of the Department of Justice men dwelt at length with proposed changes in the method of recording cases and fines in Police Court. The one now in use was installed by the Comptroller General 20 years ago and appears to be incapable of handling the heavy business of the court today.

Judge Schuldt intimated that the court already had adopted many suggestions made by the Department of Justice and is contemplating a general overhauling of the system now in vogue.

The activities of certain local bondsmen, about five in number, have long been under suspicion. First, there were whispers of improper conduct. Then, the talk became such that the District Bar Association decided to investigate. A special committee was appointed to look into the charges. It heard a great deal of confidential testimony, but thus far its findings have not been made public.

The case of the dishonest Police Court attache and that of the bondsmen will be presented to the grand jury by Assistant United States Attorney Schweinhaut. His first witness will be C. B. Bolden, an agent of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Miss Grosvener Gets Post.

Miss Edith Louise Grosvenor, Central High School teacher, has been elected state director of the National Education Association for the District at its annual convention at Denver, Colo., it was learned last night.

Crime Report Seems Headed For New Delay

Absence of Chairman May Cause Postponement by District Group.

The District crime report appears headed for another postponement today when the House District Committee meets to clear up pending legislation.

While it was uncertain whether any member will make a motion for approval or rejection, subcommittee Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, said he did not believe the report would be called up in the absence of Chairman Mary T. Norton.

Since the adoption of a motion for reconsideration two weeks ago, the report has laid on the committee table with its ultimate fate uncertain.

While there has been talk of modifying the document so as to delete criticism of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and the recommendation that he be replaced, no definite steps have been taken in this direction.

Mother Fights on To Get Son's Body

Official Aid Sought in Case of Panama Crash Victim.

By the Associated Press.

Big Stone Gap, Va., July 9.—Official support today was sought on behalf of a heart-broken mother, Mrs. Dora Parsons Graham, who is dismayed by a Government regulation which requires that she wait 18 months to receive the body of her eldest son, First Lieut. Winton Graham, Army student pilot, who was killed in a plane crash in Panama last week.

She was notified that Government health regulations prohibit shipment of her son's body, unless cremated, from Panama to his home here for 18 months. She made a positive decision against cremation.

Her friends today solicited the support of Senator Harry Byrd and Representative John Flannagan, of Virginia, in securing permission for the immediate return of the body. Former Congressman C. Bascom Slemp also was said to have taken the matter up with the Governor of Panama, an acquaintance.

Graduate Nurse Overcome by Gas

Mrs. Lorraine Boehm, 25, a graduate nurse said to be employed at a Washington hospital, was found slumped over open gas jets in the kitchen of her Capitol Heights (Md.) home yesterday.

Taken to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg rescue squad after artificial respiration had been given by a member of the Prince Georges County nursing unit, her condition was declared serious.

Charles Egan, a neighbor, said she placed her auto in her private garage about 11 a. m. A few minutes later he smelled gas. Prying a window open, he assisted Eloise Swick, daughter of the president of the town council, across the sill.

Eloise dragged Mrs. Boehm to the dining room and Egan removed her from the house through a window.

Mrs. Marie Davis, member of the newly-formed county nursing unit, who lives across the street, administered the artificial respiration. Mrs. Boehm's husband, Walter Boehm, an employe of the War Department, was said to be away on official business.

Armed Lad Runs Amuck Holds 30 Miners at Bay

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Oakland, Md., July 9.—Melvin Hoover, 18, of Jennings, a mining hamlet—4 miles south of Grantsville, was in jail here early today after having run amuck with a shotgun. The youth had been drinking, officers say. He held 30 miners at bay in a coal mine for more than an hour and shot at Louis A. Morgart, the operator.

Later he broke his gun and the miners were able to reach him. They held him for a time, but he escaped before State police arrived and was found this time armed with two guns at his home. Hoover was held on charges of assault with intent to kill.

Montgomery Gambling Drive Threat to Firemen's Revenue

Rockville Unit's Carnival Profits Will Be Cut by Ban on Games.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Montgomery County's drive on petty gambling, which got under way yesterday, probably will have far reaching results. Chief of the possible effects is that a fire tax be imposed on the town of Rockville.

Rockville volunteer firemen are going to hold a carnival next month to raise funds to defray expenses of operating their department. They are proud of the fact the department has been built up entirely through their own efforts and not through taxation.

It is feared, however, that the order issued by State's Attorney James H. Pugh and Chief of Police J. William Garrett that all paddle wheels, claw machines, bingo games, punch boards, jack pot machines, slot machines and all apparatus of similar ilk must go will cause the annual carnival to be a flop as far as the financial results are concerned. Bingo has been one of the chief attractions of the carnival in past years.

The firemen point out they will have to resort to a fire tax if they are unable to raise the money for the maintenance of their department through their carnival.

The drive started Monday, when Judge Charles W. Woodward, of the Montgomery County Circuit Court, dined at Woodward's restaurant in Rockville and saw a claw machine. He informed the proprietor it was unlawful. Tom Woodward, the proprietor, informed the judge that use of the machines was widespread and, he had been informed, legal.

When the judge returned to his office in the courthouse he sent out calls for Pugh and Garrett. Shortly afterward the law enforcement officers announced the beginning of a drive against petty gambling.

Chief of Police Garrett notified sergeants in command of the various police substations that they were to order all merchants in their territory to get rid of the machines under penalty of confiscation and fine. The precinct commanders will be held responsible for clearing the county of the machines, the chief informed them.

The order came as a surprise to merchants and volunteer firemen, as well as to many church carnival committees. All had been informed bingo was legal and the machines were legal if a weekly prize were given for the highest score.

The latter ruling had been made by State's Attorney Pugh not long ago.

County police were busy yesterday notifying merchants they must get rid of the machines. Most merchants were much chagrined, but declared they were going to obey the edict.

Pointing out there is public sentiment for the grading of the space between the two roads on Wisconsin avenue to be abandoned by the street railway company when buses supplant the Rockville car line, the Montgomery County commissioners yesterday asked the Maryland State roads commission to use any funds available for such grading.

The commissioners declared residents seek paving of the middle section for vehicular traffic after the railway is abandoned, about July 15.

The commissioners voted to place a two-week limit on an order to the proprietor of the dump on East-West highway near Sixteenth street to remedy an allegedly obnoxious condition caused by burning refuse.

The commissioners voted to decrease the force of men working on county road repair from approximately 30 to 12, because there is no provision in the levy for the maintenance of roads. This duty devolves upon the State roads commission, but had been halted by that body because of the deficit in the county's road fund.

The 12 men will complete two projects now under way.

Bethesda police were taken by surprise yesterday when Mrs. J. L. Irwin, 112 West Del Ray avenue, Bethesda, called upon them to look for a stolen swimming pool. The police were less skeptical, however, when they learned it was a portable affair of galvanized iron pipe frame and canvas covering.

The annual outing of the upper classes of the Sunday School of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Fairland, Md., will be a sail on the Potomac River tomorrow at 6 p. m.

The teachers who will be chaperones are Mrs. W. R. Adams, Mrs. Eva Marlow, Mrs. Nellie A. Marlow, Miss Pearl Marlow, Miss Bernice Lehman, Mrs. O. W. Robey and Mrs. Henry C. Lank. Mrs. Truman R. Cissel, superintendent of the Sunday school, is in charge of the arrangements.

The Masquers of Sligo Park Hills, Md., will hold a social meeting tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Wight, in Sunnyside road.

The Rev. William E. LaRue, pastor of the Baptist Church, Takoma Park, and the Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor of the Baptist Church, Chevy Chase, left yesterday for New York to attend the summer session of the Theological Union. They will be away two weeks.

One-Room School Sold by County

The one-room Bald Eagle School near Laurel, Md., which was closed last month, was ordered sold by the Prince Georges County commissioners' meeting yesterday at Upper Marlboro. The school will be sold for $500 to Robert E. Goldsmith.

The school board also ordered the closing of the one-room Tippett School near Clinton, Md., "for economic reasons." Bus service will be provided for transportation of the 17 pupils to the Surrattsville School.

Bids for bus transportation from Ritchie, Md., to the Westphalia School, ranging from $500 to $1,650 were received. No contract, however, was awarded for next year. The board expressed a desire to further investigate the bids. They also ordered an audit of the books for the year ending July 31, of this year.

Hyattsville Takes Action on Crossing

Steps to obtain the elimination of the Melrose avenue grade crossing over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks were taken by the Hyattsville mayor and council at its monthly meeting Monday night.

Declaring the crossing extremely dangerous, the town authorities decided to take action while Government funds were being made available for such purposes.

A special session of the council will be called shortly, when citizens of the town, especially those living in the First Ward east of the crossing, would be invited to express their opinions as to the proper procedure to be followed.

It was pointed out that the crossing was made more dangerous because of the fact that no watchman is on duty after 10 p. m.

Mrs. Sweikhart Dies; Resident of Glen Echo

Mrs. Lillian Moore Sweikhart, for many years a resident of Glen Echo, Md., died yesterday at the George Washington Hospital. She suffered a stroke a week ago. Mrs. Sweikhart, a native of Savannah, Ga., was the wife of Joseph O. Sweikhart.

Besides her husband, she is survived by three sisters in Atlanta, Ga. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 8:30 a. m. at the funeral home of W. Warren Taltavull, Fourteenth street and Spring road northwest. Requiem mass at 9 a. m. at St. Anthony's Church will be followed by burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Byrd Demands Legal Opinion On Guffey Bill

Resolution Asks Cummings to Rule on Measure's Constitutionality.

By the Associated Press.

A resolution demanding from Attorney General Cummings an opinion on the constitutionality of the Guffey coal bill was introduced yesterday by Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia.

The Virginian, frequent critic of the New Deal, said in a statement that "in passing unconstitutional bills the Congress of the United States is simply making a laughing stock of itself."

Only last week, Byrd said, President Roosevelt wrote the House Ways and Means Committee, where the Guffey stabilization bill now is pending:

"I hope your committee will not permit doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation."

Cummings earlier had declined to give the Ways and Means group an opinion of the bill's constitutionality.

Byrd, in his statement yesterday, said he introduced the resolution asking the Attorney General's opinion because of the "doubt expressed in high quarters as to the constitutionality of the bill."

"No member of Congress can vote for an unconstitutional bill and be true to his oath of office in which he swears to uphold and defend the Constitution," Byrd said, adding that "laymen like myself have the right to obtain the legal opinion of the office of the Attorney General."

Route Change Turned Down In Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Alexandria 823.

The city council last night rejected an amendment to the present truck route ordinance, which would have routed commercial trucks through the city north on Patrick street to Montgomery; west on Montgomery to Henry, and north on Henry street to and over the overhead bridge of the R. F. & P. Railroad. There were several protests against the proposed change, and the matter will be further considered with a view to establishing a route probably the entire length of Henry street.

An ordinance was adopted creating the office of city building inspector, at a salary of $200 a month, to serve under the city engineer, under appointment by the city manager, and to serve at the pleasure of the city council. An appropriation of $800 for four months' salary was made.

In connection with the report of the city health officer, Mayor Davison introduced a resolution instructing the city manager to see that the ordinance relating to sanitary inspection of restaurants, meat shops, grocery stores displaying food stuffs for sale, barber shops and laundries, be strictly enforced. Steps will also be taken to see that all houses in locations where sewer facilities are available shall make connections with the sewers. The mayor stated that sanitary conditions are very unsatisfactory in some locations, and insisted that steps be taken to remedy these conditions, especially in view of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in Virginia.

Resolutions providing for sewer projects on Glendale avenue and the vicinity of North Payne, Madison and Wythe streets, and in the vicinity of Hume Spring, were introduced and held over under the rules.

The parent-teachers association is sponsoring the clinics, and urges parents to take advantage of this health check-up for their children during the summer., Mrs. Charles M. Robey is general chairman.

The chairmen assisting in the pre-school schedule are Mrs. G. C. Trenary, Washington School; Mrs. Ray Feathers, Mount Vernon School; Mrs. Norman B. Morrison, Maury School, and Mrs. Brawner, Lee School.

Man Refuses Overpay For Slain Chickens

Abner Harrison, 65, of Falls Church, Va., yesterday refused to be overpaid by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors for the loss of six chickens killed by a dog. He returned $6 of $9 voted him by the supervisors.

This return of funds rather astonished county officials, who said that most persons claiming funds under the law which requires payments from dog tax funds to those losing livestock by dog depredations say the payments are too small.

Harrison's claim was for $9.72. The supervisors allowed him $9. He said that the owner of the dog had paid him $5, and that $4 from the county was enough. He accepted the warrant for $9, cashed it and returned $5 to the county treasurer.

Town Council Urges Liquor Licenses' Ban

Capitol Heights Acts After Civic Groups Protest About Barrooms.

Capitol Heights town council will oppose the further issuance of liquor licenses within the incorporated limits, it was decided Monday night.

Official opposition to the opening of more barrooms in the nearby Maryland town, where bitter controversy has raged over those already operating, is considered tantamount to a definite ban.

Such at least, has been the custom in similar cases since the establishment of the Prince Georges County liquor commissioners' board more than a year ago. Although not bound by law, the board has always considered the wishes of public officials in the various towns.

In rendering its decision, Mayor Thomas Luckett and his council pointed out that they now believe the town has a sufficient number of liquor-dispensing establishments.

Strong protests against conditions which allegedly exist as a result of the barrooms have been registered with town and county authorities by various civic organizations.

Man Killed in Brawl.

These protests were climaxed last November by the calling of a special town council meeting the day after Bennett A. Wells was killed in a midnight brawl, said to have occurred in a barroom.

The council at that time passed an ordinance closing the establishments after 1 a. m. on week days and on midnight Saturday nights. Later an ordinance was passed banning all children from the streets after dark.

The council, at its latest meeting, reappointed nine bailiffs to serve another year. These were Fred Gunnell, Albert Erskine, Robert Simons, John Barrett, Walter Stommel, William Simmons, Clyde Gainer, Henry Kreuter and Samuel Peck.

They also recommended the reconditioning of the town's streets and avenues. The recommendation will be forwarded to the State roads commission. It calls for the hard-surfacing of two of the streets and either graveling or oiling the remaining streets. Chewton avenue and Sixty-first street from Central avenue to Beck avenue will receive a tar treatment.

J. W. Beaver Elected.

J. W. Beaver, former councilman and treasurer of the Capitol Heights Volunteer Fire Department, was elected by the council to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of William O. Sweeney.

Wallace W. Rollins, chairman of the police and fire committee, was instructed to secure tags for the motorcycle recently purchased by the town. It is anticipated the new "motor cops" will begin operations on Central avenue within a short while.

Treasurer Clinton G. Light reported that the town now has $1,700 in the treasury.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 9.—A yield of 837 bushels of barley from 12 acres, or 74 bushels per acre, was reported today by Mrs. Alice Campbell, of Kernstown, Frederick County. The yield, one of the largest ever recorded in this section, is believed to establish a record for the State.

Prince Georges Approves State Bond Purchase

Sanitary Unit Authorized to Invest $50,000 in Alabama Issue.

Prince Georges County's board of commissioners yesterday authorized the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to purchase $50,000 worth of Alabama State bonds. The purchase also will have to be authororized by the Montgomery County commissioners.

J. Darby Bowman, secretary of the sanitary commission, who appeared before the board, said the bonds, which will be purchased at $101.90, will be compounded at 3½ per cent. They will mature in 1951.

The commissioners also recommended improvement of the road from Bell Station to Glenn Dale, Md., a distance of one-half mile. They received a delegation of citizens who opposed the closing of the road from the Crain highway to Queen Anne, Md.

At the close of the day the commissioners went to Fort Washington to review a battalion of Reserve Officers Training Corps cadets in summer training there.

In addition to the commissioners, the battalion of 470 men, representing approximately 15 schools of the Third Corps Area, passed in review before Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, Judge Joseph Mattingly, State Delegates Kent Mullikin and John White, and Col. J. G. Ord, commander of the fort.

Many Inspect New Type Train In Station Here

Streamlined 'Rebel' of G., M. & N. Railroad Stops on Way to South.

Carrying with it the old Southern name "Rebel," the new streamlined train of the Gulf, Mobile & Northern Railroad pulled into the Union Station at noon yesterday on its maiden trip from Newark, N. J. to New Orleans.

The "Rebel" attracted crowds of visitors yesterday afternoon, all anxious to see the Diesel-powered train built with PWA funds and equipped with the latest devices of convenience and comfort, including an air-conditioning system.

100 Miles an Hour.

It has a 660-horsepower engine and is capable of 100 miles an hour, although in actual service it will not be operated so fast.

About July 20 it will be put into regular passenger service between Jackson, Tenn., and New Orleans, a distance of 483 miles.

The train consists of three cars—a power car, a buffet coach with compartments for white and colored passengers and an observation-sleeping car. It has a seating capacity of 132 people in the day coaches and the lounge, carrying six sleeping sections and a stateroom.

All Spot Welded.

The whole structure is spot welded, eliminating all outside bolts and rivets.

A broad band of Chinese red extends both above and below the windows and is unbroken from the front to the rear of the train. Red was chosen partly because of its value in attracting attention and warning persons at highway crossings.

Continuing its exhibition tour, the "Rebel" will go down to Richmond, Atlanta, Birmingham and finally Jackson, Tenn.

Ryan Paid Tribute By Gen. Johnson

Chief of Longshoremen's Union Faces Election Fight

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 9.—Tribute to the administration of Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, was paid today by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in an address before the association's quadrennial convention.

Johnson's statement had particular significance in view of the developing fight between Ryan, conservative candidate for reelection, and a Pacific Coast radical delegation headed by Harry Bridges, militant San Francisco District leader.

"I come here to pay tribute to your union and particularly to Mr. Ryan," Johnson said, and emphasized the assistance Ryan gave him in the Coast dock strike last year while Johnson was NRA administrator.

Action on Bridges' avowed intention to attempt Ryan's ouster was delayed when a report of the resolutions and credentials committee was postponed, probably until tomorrow.

McCarl Gives Rule On Building Bids

Federal Contract Decision Affects Wages, Hours.

Bidders on Federal construction contracts need not commit themselves to abide by future legislation on wages, hours and other labor conditions, according to a decision of Comptroller General McCarl made public yesterday.

His ruling that Government agencies shall not reject bids simply because the contractor balks at the "future compliance clause" was addressed to the Veterans' Administration on a case in point.

The plan had been suggested by the Treasury Department's procurement division, which lets contracts for most Federal construction, subsequent to the dissolution of NRA codes which prescribed labor regulations.

"There appears no authority of law for requiring bidders and prospective contractors of the United States to agree to such provision as a condition precedent to contracting with the United States," McCarl stated.

12 Georgia Railroads Told to Raise Rates

By the Associated Press.

Holding that railroad freight traffic within the State of Georgia moves under substantially the same circumstances and conditions as interstate traffic, the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday overruled the Georgia Public Service Commission and ordered the 12 railroads operating in the State to place their intrastate rates on the same level as their interstate charges.

The result will be that classified freight rates within the State will be increased on an average of approximately 17.5 per cent.

Bishop Joins Fight for Repeal Of Kentucky's Dry Amendment

Education of Public Urged; Question Comes Up at November Election.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Ky., July 9.—Advocating that temperance be substituted for prohibition, Bishop H. P. Almon Abbott, of the Episcopal Church, joined today in a campaign for repeal of Kentucky's dry amendment.

In a discussion of "character-building and temperance," the Lexington diocese bishop said he favored the repeal of existing State laws against alcoholic beverages and the education of the public in "the philosophy of regulation." Kentuckians will vote on repeal at the November election. Liquor now is sold in Kentucky as a medicine.

"I believe, and whole-heartedly," the bishop said, "that to be moderate in all things, even in the drinking of intoxicating liquors, is a virtue in itself, and commended as such, by writers inspired of the Holy Ghost. I indulge, then, when I feel so inclined for my stomach sake, and my oftentime infirmities; I have chosen the harder part; for I must be forever on my guard and see to it that I do not pass beyond the bounds of temperate employment of my privilege."

Bishop Abbott declared that in limiting himself to six cigarettes a day for the past 30 years he felt that he was "more of a hero, so far as tobacco is concerned, than the man who does not smoke at all, and who is under the strong conviction that tobacco is of the devil."

"I realize, of course," Bishop Abbott added, "that in saying all this, I lay myself open to misrepresentation and condemnation; but I am steeled against such false judgment and adverse criticism by remembrance of the illuminating scriptural passages: 'The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they said, behold, a gluttonous man and a wine-bibber.'"

Swift Current Turns Autos Half-Sidewise

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., July 9.—Motorists proceeded "crab-like" for about 100 yards over the highway at Little Elk Creek, half a mile south of here, today.

Water running-board deep was rushing over the highway from the creek and so stiff was the current that rear-ends of automobiles were swept to one side of the road. The drivers turned their cars toward the current and the cars went through in a half-sidewise manner.

Men were stationed every few feet along the flooded portion of the highway to guide the cars through. One woman motorist fainted. Several roadside guards stepped into her car, piloted it to safety and revived her.

1 Injured, Driver Held In Hit-Run Accident

Walter S. Buchanon, 64, of Trevillian, Va., was injured early yesterday when he was knocked down by a hit-and-run automobile at John Marshall place and C street northwest.

Soon after the accident, police arrested Christ Poulos, 41, 2912 Bladensburg road northeast, and accused him of being the driver of the auto involved. Poulos was released on bond pending the outcome of Buchanon's injuries.

$10,000 Asked In Jane Cooke's Accident Suit

Redress Demand Made on Railroad in Crash After Her Elopement.

The loss of her two pet dogs and a shaking up she received when an Atlantic Coast Line train crashed into the automobile in which she and her newly acquired husband were dashing back to Washington are worth $10,000 to her, Mrs. Jane Cooke Scarlett, of Crevy Chase, Md., informed the District Supreme Court yesterday when she filed suit against the railroad.

Her complaint was that the railroad was negligent in not providing a safe grade crossing at the point where the automobile in which she and her husband, George Stanton Scarlett, who before his marriage to the fashionable Miss Cooke was the family's chauffeur and handy man, collided with the train. The automobile was demolished, she said, and her two pet dogs disappeared and have not been found.

In addition to the suit yesterday, the Scarletts figure in two other bits of litigation. In one, the young debutante seeks an annulment of her marriage, and in the other her husband demands $100,000 claiming his mother-in-law "maliciously prosecuted" him. Scarlett alleges his mother-in-law had him arrested on a warrant charging him with failing to return jewelry she had given him to take to a store.

After the charges were dropped in the Rockville (Md.) courts, Scarlett retaliated by filing suit for damages because of his arrest. Even before that he and his youthful wife had parted company.

Judicious Changes?

The most pronounced reaction to the slate of judges appointed to the District Police Court is disappointment that the name of Judge Given was not included. In his many years as a prosecutor and judge in the local court Judge Given has merited the respect of the public as well as the bar. If there is any good reason why the court should be denied his experienced judgment, it has not been made available to the public.

Judge Given's successor, Walter J. Casey, is doubtless a promising young lawyer, even though he is not widely known in judicial circles. When vacancies in the lower courts must be filled strong arguments can be made for choosing young men able to grow with experience and thus qualify for higher judicial positions. In that respect the choices of Mr. Casey and Miss Ready are especially appropriate. The only question which arises is whether the advantages accruing through the selection of young judges, who are necessarily inexperienced, can offset the unquestioned loss when a mature and seasoned jurist is required to step down.

When there is a hint of political favoritism in such a change the loss to the community is less subject to question.

Most Curious Yardstick.

To anyone who has not followed the details of the legislative scrap over the Tennessee Valley experiment the grounds on which the opposing forces have taken their stand is calculated to cause surprise. No concerted effort is being made to abolish the TVA or to thwart its original purposes. Rather Congress is divided on the question of how far the powers of the TVA should be extended.

Debate of the issue in the House is replete with charges that the TVA has exceeded its authority and is now seeking legislative sanction for past irregularities. There seems to be an overwhelming opinion that the TVA is reaching too far beyond its original objectives, as indicated by the following comment from Representative Faddis, who describes himself as "a very strong Democrat:"

> Eighteen months ago we established the TVA to be used as a yardstick in the United States in the measurement of utility rates; and now they have come back to us and asked to be converted from a yardstick into a 100-foot chain.

One point of controversy, for example, involves supervision of the Comptroller General over TVA disbursements. A strong group in the House believes, as Representative Plumley pointed out, that "the TVA should be required to put its financing on the same open, aboveboard basis as is now required of public utilities generally."

Astonishing as it may seem, the TVA objects to this orderly procedure, on the ground that it would involve additional expense and delay in its numerous construction projects. At a time when the Administration is demanding the dissolution of some utility corporations, as well as drastic regulation for all interstate business of this class, this effort to exempt its own utility experiment from routine auditing and supervision is utterly indefensible.

Under the Senate bill the TVA would be permitted to duplicate existing transmission lines. One purpose of this authority is to beat down the price at which lines may be acquired. Under the House bill taxpayers' money could not be wasted in the construction of new power lines where suitable facilities already exist; but the TVA would have full power to condemn a private line essential to its program if negotiations for its purchase should fail. The fact that this obviously fair procedure does not meet with official approval suggests that the TVA hopes to do business by clubbing instead of negotiating.

Still another House committee amendment to which the Administration objects would forbid the sale of surplus power below production cost after January 1, 1937. It does not appear that the TVA is especially interested in disposing of power at a loss, but that it is trying to hamper efforts to ascertain what is the cost of production under TVA. Determination of production costs will be a complicated undertaking, because it involves valuation of deteriorated plants built during the war as well as strict accounting methods. But it is the first essential if this experiment is to afford a power-rate yardstick.

In short, the issue before Congress seems to be whether the TVA is really a yardstick for determining power rates or a privileged Government corporation empowered to crush private competing companies by fair or unfair methods. To draw a line between the two objectives may be difficult, but it is a task which Congress must face squarely.

A Really Dangerous Lobby.

Whether or not Thomas Corcoran, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, attempted to intimidate Representative Brewster, of Maine, by tactics not far removed from blackmail is a question of fact which the House Rules Committee must try by every means in its power to determine. For if official lobbying has really reached the stage where Administration underlings are influencing legislation by bribes and threats, the break-down of representative government in this country is in sight.

Fortunately there seems to have been a witness, albeit one prejudiced on the underlying issue, at the conversation in which the former Governor of Maine charges that Corcoran attempted to coerce his "death sentence" vote by threatening to stop construction on the Passamaquoddy Dam. Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of the Interior Department's division of territories and island possessions, overheard what was said, according to Mr. Brewster. In view of the direct contradictions in the testimony of Brewster and Corcoran it is to be assumed that Dr. Gruening will be placed under oath to give his version of this extraordinary discussion.

But regardless of the exact words used by Corcoran to Brewster, appalling evidence of politically unethical conduct by civil servants has been presented to the committee. By what principle of straightforward and responsible government was an R. F. C. attorney lobbying at the Capitol on the utilities bill? For what legitimate purpose did Corcoran—if Mr. Brewster quotes him correctly—have "a little office" in the Capitol? And for that matter, why was Dr. Gruening, whose official business is with our distant political dependencies, concerning himself so actively with this particular legislation?

Perhaps there are reasonable answers to these and various similar questions. If so they should be promptly forthcoming. For the testimony before the House Rules Committee yesterday was strongly to the effect that utterly irresponsible government is operating in Washington. That is the only applicable phrase when administrative officers who are supposed to be doing technical executive jobs are in fact spending their time in trying to influence legislation which is in no way the concern of their nominal office.

A lobby of this character is doubly vicious. It means that legislation is being formulated in a particularly underhand manner, because Government officials are by their positions of trust free from the suspicion which attaches to the motives of commercial lobbyists. And it means further that the lobbying administrator is failing to do the technical job to which he was ostensibly appointed, and for which he is being paid with public funds. And here again the hireling of the interested corporation comes well out of the comparison.

The two-edged lobbying inquiry launched by the House is the most potentially important investigation undertaken during this Administration by a Congressional committee. Before it is over, if the Rules Committee does its duty, the country will have a much clearer idea of the way in which it is being governed.

D. C. Unemployment Insurance.

The controversy between Representative Ellenbogen and Senator King over the District unemployment insurance bill turns upon one basic issue. Mr. Ellenbogen sponsored and the House passed what was believed to be a model measure in this field. Its provisions were not designed to conform with the specific needs of the local community, but were rather intended to give the District an unemployment insurance system which the States might emulate. Senator King, on the other hand, is trying to amend the bill so that it will be economically and socially sound when applied to actual conditions here.

For the most part, the amendments proposed by the District Commissioners and supported by Senator King would bring the local measure more closely into line with standards laid down in the parent social security legislation. Numerous precautions have been taken to safeguard the national legislation, under which the States have liberty to adapt their systems to local conditions. The important thing now is to get these local systems established on a conservative basis. When that is done contributions and benefits can be adjusted in the best interests of the communities affected.

There is no reason whatever why safeguards regarded as standard should be dropped in the enactment of a statute for the District. The local unemployment insurance bill should be drawn for the benefit of the people of Washington alone. Even if the passage of an experimental measure could be justified, Washington would not be the best place for its application. For the Capital is not a typical industrial city. In several respects its unemployment problem is unique. An experiment with an especially drastic bill here would not only be dangerous from the viewpoint of the local community. It also would probably be useless as an example for the States to follow.

By all means the local bill should be amended so as to accord with Washington's own needs. It must be sound from the viewpoint of the community which it will serve. Senator King has done well to take the leadership of a movement to amend the bill along this line. It is only regrettable, that both he and the Commissioners have failed to include within their proposed amendments that sound provision for employe contributions which several States have already adopted.

Half-Billion More.

The Treasury celebrated the new fiscal year by calling upon the money markets for $500,000,000 with which to build up its working balance in anticipation of heavy relief outlays. The new medium-term notes were offered at the extraordinarily low rate of 1¾ per cent and were immediately heavily oversubscribed.

The ease with which the Treasury has been able to place low-yield offerings on increasingly favorable terms, despite the large volume of its issues, unfortunately tends to allay alarm over the size of the budgetary deficit and to minimize unduly the seriousness of the outlook. The average man is naturally inclined to laugh at warnings that the public credit is threatened by deficit financing when he discovers that the Government is borrowing at record low rates not only for a few weeks or months, but for periods of several years.

The explanation of the paradox is found in the broad market for Government issues which has been created by artificial means. Banks have been put in possession of immense surplus balances for which no employment can be found through ordinary commercial channels. These surpluses were created first through open-market purchases of Government securities by Federal Reserve Banks, and more recently by heavy Government expenditures which returned to the banks in the form of individual deposits. As a result of these abnormal conditions, the banks are prepared to purchase Government issues on terms highly favorable to the borrower in order to obtain some return on their unused resources.

The low rates prevailing for money, combined with the huge volume of excess reserves, have been especially helpful to the Treasury because of the absence of adequate outlets for funds in private investment channels. The extent to which the Government has monopolized the securities market is strikingly shown by the figures for new capital flotations during the first half of the present year. And the record is especially arresting in view of the emphasis placed upon the revival that has recently occurred in the market for new issues. According to the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, domestic issues of corporations amounted to only $569,000,000 between January 1 and June 30 of the present year, contrasted with a total of $5,057,000,000 for the corresponding period in 1929. Furthermore, refunding operations accounted for most of the new offerings during the first half of this year, with only $100,000,000 provided for new capital purposes.

In the investment field, therefore, the Government is a dominant borrower, although it, too, has recently placed its issues largely for refunding purposes. Thus in the six months to June 30 the Treasury sold securities to the amount of $6,411,000,000, of which only $523,000,000 represented an addition to the public debt. Now that Treasury balances have been drawn down, borrowing will to an increasing extent be paralleled by a rise in Federal indebtedness. This is a factor that will have to be taken into account in estimating the future absorptive capacity of the market.

Moreover, it is clear that an extensive revival of the private capital market would create serious problems for the Treasury, in addition to those resulting from the apprehensions aroused among the well-informed by our steadily-mounting national debt.

Rocking Chairs.

A justly plaintive note is detected in an article in the New York Times which amounts to an obituary for rocking chairs. According to furniture dealers of that city, the sale of rockers is decidedly on the wane. When they are purchased infrequently, it is more for the purpose of attaining an Early American effect than for their intrinsic virtues. The "dwindling legion of placid folk" who continue to demand the rocker, do so with a slightly apologetic air, obviously fearful that they are defending a lost cause.

There is no little controversy as to the source of the rocking chair, yet there is no other one article of furniture so little conducive to argument. There is something both neighborly and peaceful about its rhythmic and dispassionate roll, conjuring up the same sweet nostalgia that comes from a whiff of old-fashioned gingerbread baking in the oven. In babyhood, no cradle could take the place of being rocked by mother in a great, comfortable chair and later on that was the quickest cure for a stubbed toe or a skinned knee. It is reminiscent, too, of small-town evenings, when the day's work is done, the supper dishes cleared away, and the sprinkler playing on the lawn. Then it was that difficulties and disappointments were rocked comfortably away in chairs that seemed especially designed for that purpose.

Fads in furniture—period, modernistic, futuristic—are indications of unrest and in some cases progress. Small, built-in closets are certainly preferable to the ungainly umbrella-and-hat racks which used to haunt front halls. French doors are a decided improvement over tasselled portieres. But before it is too late, a definite stand should be taken against the passing of the rocking chair. It is no fancy to be taken lightly by decorators and made a period piece. In the cause of the old-fashioned rocker "placid folk" should stand up for what were once regarded as inalienable rights—and rites—of sitting down.

Against Bonus March.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I see that Mr. Robertson, former leader of the bonus marchers in 1932, is back with us again to start more trouble. I wonder if my comrades of the World War, who are now following this gentleman, were in that historical march of 1932 and recall what they gained by it. My answer is very brief and facts, as I was in it myself to the end. Nothing but criticism by the public, bloodshed to many and death to four and no bonus in the end.

Even our leader, W. W. Waters, deserted in the start of the trouble, and now what has he got? Why, a Government job, and I ask you, comrades, what have you got, and my answer is still the same. Nothing! Our chances right now are 100 per cent for passage of the bonus, and a bonus march now would only blockade the ground we have already gained.

Mr. Robertson's aim seems to be to get a bill through to pay the needy veterans. Will Mr. Robertson please recall the United States entering the World War? When President Woodrow Wilson issued a call for volunteers he was no respecter of persons as to station in life, creed or color. When Congress passed the emergency conscript or draft law, it also was no respecter of persons as to station in life, creed or color. So if Congress passes a bill to pay one veteran, it should by all means pass a bill to pay all or none. I am a World War veteran myself, enlisted May 12, 1917, until June 6, 1919, also serving overseas on four major battle fronts.

Right now I need my bonus as well as the next veteran, as I am on relief, but why cause more hardship to get it and lose out in the long run?

You can not buck the Government. Think it over, buddies.

Please accept my thanks for printing the full-page picture of the Washington Cathedral from the bishop's garden. Everyone I have shown it to says it is very beautiful and I think that many Episcopalians will cherish this picture highly.

Economic Bill Of Rights.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

To Senator Costigan, of Colorado, is due the credit for the coinage of a new phrase, "An Economic Bill of Rights." The primary purpose of the original Constitution, in the language of the preamble, was to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity. The structure of this instrument was necessarily concerned largely with setting up the machinery of government and perfecting the mechanics of its operation.

The agriculturally minded framers of the Constitution could not possibly vision the economic state of affairs as they confront the Nation today. Indeed the terms "industry" and "economics," in their current use, had not been coined. The Constitution, however, will have to be rewritten in order to secure to the individual an economic bill of rights which the original Constitution guaranteed as respects personal liberty. The sixteenth amendment imposing an income tax, was the first alteration in the Constitution of an economic character. The early and future amendments to the Constitution will be of the nature of guaranteeing to the individual more equitable participation in the production and distribution of wealth. This is the new "economic bill of rights," which is now inevitable for industrial opportunity and economic well-being and are absolutely essential to the blessings of liberty.

Fortunately the fathers had the wisdom to provide for the orderly expansion of the Constitution to meet the changing demands of time. The old bottle can be expanded so as to hold the new wine.

Relief Of Oldsters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Speaking of old-age pensions, I can imagine the sigh of relief which will go up from probably a million individuals of 60 years of age and over if and when Congress adjourns without having destroyed the value of their life-insurance policies.

For A World Dollar.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

To those who have not made of the gold standard a golden bull, before which they fall down and worship, it ought to be obvious that no single measure by this Administration could do so much to stabilize world-wide finances as the fixation of a stable parity between silver and gold. There can be little question that the lead of this Government would be quickly followed by other great powers. Glorious opportunities for foreign trade are also awaiting the power which takes the lead in the restoration of silver. It might mean a slight inflation, but it would stop agitation for printing-press money and hasten a return to specie payment by all the powers.

My principal motive in reviewing this question, however, is to suggest an important reform in our coinage laws which should come about along with the settlement of the silver-gold parity: the use of the Troy grain should give place to the metric gram in our coinage. Our new gold dollar consists of 15 5-21 grains of 9-10 fine gold, which is .9845+ of a metric gram. To make our gold dollar weigh one gram would be equal to reducing the price of gold from $35 to $34.46 an ounce. But with our enormous stock of gold that would represent a loss to the Treasury of some $130,000,000. It would, however, make the American dollar the standard of the world, on which all other currencies would be modeled.

A 40-to-1 ratio would then mean a silver dollar weighing 40 grams of 9-10 fine silver . . . slightly less than 50 per cent heavier than our present silver dollar. And, as our present silver dollars would need to be melted down into bullion, there would be another loss here. The profits from the advance purchase of silver would probably offset these losses, but no such profit as resulted from the devaluation of the gold dollar need be hoped for.

Settlement of the coinage question along these lines would be glory enough for one administration, even though the American people may repudiate the President's leadership because of his collectivist and centralizing tendencies . . . strange ideas to come from a leader of the party of Jefferson.

The Sick Nation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It appears that this country of ours resembled nothing so much as one vast hospital, all its inmates ill of the same disease. The head of the staff has his hands full. Some are getting better and should help others. If blood transfusion or flesh grafting be needed it is the humane province and duty of the convalescent and whole to offer the sacrificial flesh and blood. The head doctor is entitled in this acute crisis to the utmost sympathy and support.

The idea has always obtained that it is a poor specimen of humanity that doesn't hold the doctor in high esteem. He has been fussed at, but he has stood serene and high up since the coining of the title, "The Great Physician," set the high mark for him.

When this Nation was born its founders knew that the seeds of future trouble inhered in this, as in all capitalistic communities; that there existed a congenital germ—difficulty of balance maintenance. It has hatched and there has developed an alarming, malignant disease. Only a few of Mr. Roosevelt's ablest predecessors gave it other than the most perfunctory thought. This is a task that merits the support of the entire Nation, in whose outcome the whole world is vitally interested.

Taxpayer Favors National Lottery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The writer read with considerable interest yesterday the letter in your columns favoring the Kenney lottery commission bill, with which I thoroughly agree.

I shall not rehash the many points favorable to a national lottery, but desire to call attention to the fact that money was raised by lottery to finance the American Revolution. Also, many churches of that period and later were financed by public lottery. Today France and Italy and other countries are financing their increased military expenses by lottery.

Beginning this new fiscal year, last Monday, our Army is being stepped up an additional 45,000 men; our Navy, an additional 20,000 men; our Marines, an additional 1,500 men. Plus this, our country urgently needs at once 2,500 up-to-date military planes to protect our shores and keep our place in the sun in aviation. In addition, of course, is our $240,000,000 naval program, now in its first stages of construction.

These increased expenses, amounting to $600,000,000 annually, will be an ever-increasing charge, both principal and interest, for Mr. Citizen.

I do not begrudge this new life insurance policy for our Nation. I favor it 100 per cent during such a cycle of international uncertainty over the map of the world.

Ah, but Mr. Chairman, who is going to pay the bill? That's the question! As a small stockholder in "U. S. A. Common," I recommend to the President and Chairman of the Board, F. D. R. that Congress pass the national lottery commission bill ot meet these increasing necessary fixed charges in as painless a way as possible.

The temper of the people is not conducive to the acceptance of these increased charges through ordinary methods of taxation.

Eastern Shore Potatoes

GANG wars, tong wars—I have seen the horror of them in Chicago, and race riots on the Eastern Shore of Virginia when I was a child, but in recent weeks the Eastern Shore has been in the agony of the first potato war it has known. It is the first time in the history of farming in this section that there has been whole-hearted regimentation of farmers in trying to bring about measures for the good of all. Always before some have agreed and then turned traitor. But this year all were resolute in demanding a price for their produce which would at least pay the expenses of growing. They enforced marketing rules and, by force, potatoes were prevented from passing the Maryland line. Northampton and a few Accomac farmers guarded the State highway, the railroads and the water boundaries of the shore. Grim-faced farmers turned pickateers and when orders would not halt trucks a shot through a tire would.

* * * *

The minimum price of $2 per barrel for prime potatoes was the ultimate end they sought. A telegram to Congressman Bland, who represents this section of Virginia in Congress, went out on June 27 bearing the names of 200 Eastern Shoremen. As I read that list of names I recognized among them farmers—yes—in that they owned land, but some of them probably did not know red clay from fertile soil. They were men who had professional training and back in the days when Eastern Shore farmers were piling up comfortable bank accounts these professional men bought farms and placed Negroes on them.

The past four years have been difficult years, prices low and fertilizer and seed potatoes high, with warnings going unheeded that crops must be cut unless the price was to be unbearably low. Those men who had other means of earning a livelihood merely laughed and declared that better times were coming and invested more heavily in fertilizer and seed. So year after year they have lost much looking for a "good" year, and at the same time have flooded the market with potatoes that were not needed, because the purses of the poor had become too slender to allow a full larder and a full stomach.

While the tenant farmer fed his children on potatoes and made them ill from too much starch, neglecting to provide enough green vegetables in his attempt to raise too many potatoes, the tenement children of the cities were suffering from malnutrition because fresh vegetables were unavailable through lack of money. It is a riddle, isn't it?

* * * *

In the past the potato farmer has quietly gone about harvesting his crop, not questioning whether he could make expenses—relying the supposed judgment of local dealers. If he had given a stated number of barrels of potatoes for a stated amount of seed potatoes and fertilizer, hired help, and paid them as best he could—often with farm produce—he dug his potatoes when the man who financed him said so. If his yield was poor it was sometimes necessary to buy from his neighbors to fill his contract, or that being impossible, a mortgage went on his already overburdened farm. If he was fortunate enough to be able to draw a check for his seed and fertilizer it was his privilege if the other farmers started selling at a low price, to dig what was necessary for his home consumption—enough to help feed his stock until early corn was ready—and leave the rest in the ground to freeze and make the land more fertile for another year.

The pitiful part of the potato story is the tenant farmer, with his meager income, his large family, more often than not illiterate, because when they were of school age the money for clothes and books was not available, his wife too weary with overwork and child-bearing to know or care for a world outside her own rude shack—all this is a reality. Our glorious Eastern Shore has spots that lack the most common facilities for decent living. I am sure even Mayor Moore of Philadelphia would recognize them as the lowest level of slums. Washington's slums, which must go by edict of the PWA housing project, will surpass the Eastern Shore tenant house or the shack and lot of the poorer class of farmers.

Higher prices were needed. The six-man governing committee of the Potato Growers Council met all afternoon on July 1, and the next day independent truckers were permitted to cross the Maryland line if the driver of the truck could present a pass signed by a notary public or bank cashier, showing the stipulated price of not less than $1.90 paid by the trucker to the grower.

With the dawn of March 4, 1933, the outworn ideas which formed the backbone of American tradition gave way as a new freedom came to the White House and spread slowly throughout the country. It has rolled on and on until it is noticeable in even the smaller things that comprise country life.

The potato belt has always felt it was a reflection on the ambitious farmer to have potatoes in the field on July 4. Yet this year a mass meeting of farmers and dealers at Central High School, Painter, Va., the edict was passed out: "Do not ship any potatoes July 3." State roads were cleared of trucks, freight trains were stalled and an Eastern Shore tradition lapsed as farmers waited for advice from Washington to help them through their dilemma.

Back To The Minors.

RUSH HOLT, first of the Young Democrats to graduate into the major league, made what is affectionately termed his maiden speech in the Senate yesterday and we sports writers disagreed widely in appraising it. This one's carefully considered verdict is that it was a flop and that if anyone from West Virginia had to make a speech yesterday a far better showing would have been made by Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District sub-committee investigating crime. He is really good.

On the part of those who thought Rush did fairly well there was a noticeable tendency to compare him with his colleague, Neely, who sat very glum in his seat, and with his predecessors, Hatfield and Goff. Any such comparison would have to be favorable to the boy, but it is very faint praise, indeed. In fact, when he said that in the matter of the utilities "death" clause he knew what the people of his State wanted, we couldn't help thinking of their senatorial parade, Goff, Hatfield, Neely and Rush, and wondering if there is really any accounting for them.

It is significant, too, that while the verdicts on the prodigy's effort ranged from "very good" to "rotten" no one got the impression that he would set the world on fire. The Senators mostly listened to his speech without any display of interest. Tom Heflin stood in the door to the cloakroom studying him intently in the light, presumably, of the many things he has seen come and go in the Senate in his time, and Burton Wheeler turned around in his chair to face him because Burton thinks its another vote for his side.

He talked in a voice that carries very well, but in that "The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck" singsong. He had two phrases designed to click, one of them new and one used so many times by "statesmen" who have preceded him as to grate upon the ears. The first one caused Tom Heflin to laugh, a twitter in the galleries and Arthur Capper to look up inquiringly from the papers on his desk. I got the impression that Rush had almost forgot to use it, that he had tied a string around his finger to remind him to say it and, noticing the string suddenly, he blurted out:

"The holding company is a device by which State legislation is evaded, Federal regulation is dodged, the investor is swindled and the consumer is gouged." That's really telling the power trust something and I'll bet it prevents another Insull.

The other phrase described the holding companies as "an economic waste and a cancerous growth." You've heard that one, of cuorse, a million times before. It seems to me, frankly, that four years in high school and four years in college ought to produce better than that.

There must be a million youngsters in this country who would have made a better showing. They didn't have the opportunity because they didn't live in West Virginia in the hectic year of 1934.

• • • •

There wasn't the slightest reason for his making a speech. His attitude on the power trust is very well known, as is also the fact that he approves of what Mr. Roosevelt is doing. He once issued a statement that the President saw eye to eye with him, or, rather, that the President's views "are akin to mine." He, himself, can probably give no satisfactory reason for his making the speech. He did it, of course, because of the same vanity which made him think he could settle the problems with which this Nation is faced, that the Nation's councils needed his young blood. We really didn't at all. This is a very dangerous vanity for one of his age. Coming in later life, a man doesn't have so long to live after he fails. Unless this boy changes he will crash before he reaches middle age.

Some hope for him is seen in the leavening influence of Joe Guffey, that peerless leader of the people, who spoke encouragingly to him as he stood at his desk awaiting the opportunity to speak. What a comforting send-off this must have been. Peerless Joe—but practical, yes, very practical, indeed.

Rush has six years to go, and then he may go on or go back to dancing with the Young Democrats in the Willard Hotel. There is where he shines.

Bees And Politics

New York Watches Mayor And Park Commissioner Moses Growl Through A Political Wrangle As Radio City Bees Assert Individualism By Ignoring Keeper's Corn Sirup.

By Ralph E. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

THIS started off to be a column about insects, which are appropriate to the summer season even in the city, but somehow or other it got switched off into politics, probably because LaGuardia and Moses are buzzing at each other about the new Brooklyn Zoo, which is full of insects as well as animals, including a contingent (animals, not insects) contributed by S. Klein who operates the Snatch-and-Run dress shop on Union Square where so many ladies go to shoplift the bargains. The preceding sentence is purposely written in a complicated manner by way of illustrating the complexity of the row between LaGuardia and Moses, who used to pretend they were buddies. At present it is a growl, rather than a brawl, but sooner or later it is going to be a brawl. And both men are good catch-as-catch-can brawlers.

Things have been simmering between the two ever since LaGuardia rode into the mayoralty on a popular revolt against Tammany. The mayor's politics are a little confused. He has been by turns a Democrat, a Socialist and a Republican, whichever, say his enemies, happened to suit his election prospects best. Nevertheless he has the reputation of being a very sincere man. So has Moses, who has always been a Republican, though of the Liberal wing which got along so well with the Al Smith type of Democrat.

At present Mr. LaGuardia is both a Democrat and a Republican, being a Fushionist. But he plays his cards a good deal like a Socialist, much to the anguish of the Republicans whom he ostensibly represents and privately ignores. And, as a Democrat, he is exteremely partial to the New Deal which has been extremely kind to him, dripping funds into his official lap, as you might say, without let or hindrance.

Moses, on the other hand, is about as popular with the New Deal as a sore thumb in a bowling alley. Nevertheless, Moses is LaGuardia's park commissioner, among other things, and the most efficient man in the LaGuardia administration, if he can really be said to be in it. He is also, by an odd chance, on the Triborough Bridge Authority which is one of the New Deal's You-Do-This-Way-Or-Else undertakings.

• • • •

YOU will all recall, my children, how Mr. Ickes, with flying banners, marched up the hill and then marched down again in the effort to remove Mr. Moses from the New Deal map and the Triborough Bridge Authority, and pay him off for some of the mean things he said about the Roosevelt Administration when he was running (perhaps walking, or strolling would be better) for Governor on the Republican ticket. At that time Mr. LaGuardia just kind of sat around, coughing occasionally, but not saying very much. But enough people did speak their minds to discourage Mr. Ickes and secure an interpretation of his famous order mild enough to permit Moses to remain in the promised lard.

However, when his term ran out LaGuardia just forgot to reappoint him. When this was called to the mayor's attention he did reappoint Moses verbally and vaguely, but the fiery park commissioner exploded into a series of ultimata which made the welkin ring. LaGuardia dismissed this as "baby talk" and when the Brooklyn Zoo was opened the appointment, due on the first of the month had failed to materialize. Consequently, both LaGuardia and Moses failed to materialize at the opening, which left Al Smith holding the bag and muttering about "back alley politics." But meanwhile public opinion was rising against easing Moses out the back door and LaGuardia has let it be known that if Moses will appear at his office not only will all be forgiven but the formalities of a reappointment will be observed to the last jot and tittle. Moses says he will be there, receptive to both jots and tittles.

That is not the end, though, and no patched up peace will dwell very long in the two camps. Moses and LaGuardia together constitute a little group of willful men. In other words, each likes his own way and has a habit of getting it. Besides, the longer Moses remains in office the greater political threat he becomes to LaGuardia, especially if Fusion doesn't happen to hold together. Tammany is fairly well cowed, but cracks are beginning to appear on the surface of reform. And Mr. Moses is the kind of person who doesn't hesitate to make a crack whenever he feels like it.

WELL, that's all there is about politics—there isn't any more. So we will have to get back to insects. Take bees, for instance. When your hostess serves you honey, of course, it is an old wheeze to ask her if she keeps a bee. But, by and large, you wouldn't believe there was much bee lore to be culled among city walls. Well, that's just where you are mistaken.

There is a fine swarm of bees in the Garden of the Nations on the eleventh floor set back of Rockefeller Center, or, as everybody calls it, Radio City. The bees are not there for the purpose of carrying wireless messages or buzzing into a radio program, but to make honey and, perhaps, to advertise the place a little.

They are high-toned hummers, at that—specially imported and bonded Italian honey bees, as a matter of fact. There aren't enough flowers in the restricted garden for the bees to manufacture much nectar, so a jar of sugar sirup has been set close by the hive. But bees are nothing if not industrious, and don't seem to like the idea of being on relief. They continually zoom over the parapets and it is believed they have established a well-traveled bee line to Central Park. Honey culled from flowers in Central Park by bees operating from Radio City ought to be something pretty triple-X.

Miss Priscilla Jaquith is keeper of the bees, and she thinks she has about 1,000 little charges. However, she hasn't finished counting them yet, though she has been several weeks at it. The bees haven't stung anybody so far, but they maintain a sentinel bee whose duty it is to bring the hive swarming when anybody ventures too close. A telephone operator who left her switchboard to take up bee study a little too familiarly found herself panic-stricken in the midst of a buzzing cloud. Miss Jacquith warns everybody now. The denizens of the hive seem reasonably happy, and when the time comes John D. Rockefeller, jr., is expected to get his comb of honey from contented bees.

• • • •

THEY also have bees at Hempstead, Long Island, but not such nice ones. Indeed, they are suffering from a plague of bees down there. A queen will come along and settle most anywhere, in an office building, on a traffic light, or somebody's front stoop. The fire department seems more or less helpless in face of the visitation and the police department shrugs and points out that it hasn't got wings and that it is extremely difficult to shoot a bee in flight. The consequence is that the town corporation has had to hire a bee farmer who doesn't get paid exactly, but goes around and collects the bees for his own use without having to pay a tax. But at the present writing, the bees are several laps ahead of the bee farmer and more are arriving every day. Something like a bee carnival at Hempstead seems to have been widely advertised in the insect world.

Down in Maspeth, Long Island, the citizenry is all agog over red and blue water bugs which are showing up in their drinking fluid. The only sensible suggestion made to meet the situation is to add some white water bugs and make a patriotic celebration out of every drink.

State Veterans Of Spanish War Select Heads

W. A. Seddinger, Norfolk, Named Commander of Virginia Department.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

William A. Seddinger, of Norfolk, was elected commander of the Department of Virginia, United Spanish War Veterans, at the closing session of the twenty-seventh annual encampment yesterday. Lynchburg was selected as next year's convention city.

Mr. Seddinger succeeds George W. Cummings, of Richmond. He served for three terms as commander of the Marshall Terrill Camp, No. 50, of Norfolk, was past junior vice commander of the Department of Virginia, and is now a member of the national legislative committee. He served in the Spanish-American War with the Fourth Virginia regiment of volunteer infantry, and is a retired attache of the Monticello Hotel in Norfolk.

Other officers chosen were B. E. Brown, Petersburg, senior vice commander; Charles B. Emmons, Alexandria, junior vice commander, and E. L. Hawkins, Lynchburg, marshal. There was a three-cornered race for junior vice commander, other candidates being E. M. Bernstein, Richmond, and L. E. Wingfield, Richmond.

Appointive Officers Named.

The appointive officers announced by Department Commander Seddinger were L. E. Winfield, Lynchburg, patriotic instructor; Joseph Rosanna, Norfolk, department adjutant; W. Washbaugh, Charlottesville, chaplain; Charles Worrell, Petersburg, historian; P. D. Bass, Richmond, senior color sergeant; Joseph Nicholson, Portsmouth, junior color sergeant; E. C. The new officers were installed by William S. Orthman, national provost marshal, with Joseph Rosanna, Norfolk, as master of ceremonies.

Just before adjournment, Past Commander Cummings read a telegram announcing the death in Norfolk yesterday of A. M. Eberly, past department commander. A committee was named to draft resolutions of respect to his memory.

A patriotic address was delivered at the morning session yesterday by National Provost Marshal William S. Orthman, attacking the society government theory, in which he declared the way to stop pacifism and communism was to place the American flag in every school in the Nation, and to have the teachers deliver patriotic talks. He also suggested an increase in membership of the Boy Scout movement from 8,000,000 to 18,000,000.

Teacher Oath Proposed.

The convention adopted a resolution, to be presented at the next meeting of the State legislature, providing that no teacher be employed in the public schools who is not a naturalized citizen of the United States, and that all teachers be required to take the oath of allegiance to the flag.

A resolution proposing that a committee go before the next legislature and urge that the history of the Spanish-American War be taught in all public schools, was adopted.

Another resolution adopted asked appointment of a committee to urge the passage of a bill to enfranchise many Spanish-American War veterans in the State disqualified from voting, due to old age or disability, and who offered their services to the Government without the necessity of a poll tax qualification.

Galsworthy Festival

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

MR. LEON M. LION, one of the most famous actor-managers of London, and known especially for the last ten years as a producer and actor of the chief plays of Galsworthy, is the founder and director of the Galsworthy Festival Season of 1935, given at the Playhouse Theater, of which he is now the lessee.

• • • •

Mr. Lion has already produced this season "The Skin Game" and "Justice," in both of which he took the leading parts. Last week we attended the first night of his revival of Galesworthy's "A Family Man," which has not been seen on the stage in England for about 15 years. It is one of the gayest and most lively comedies that this distinguished author ever wrote. The production was ideal, both in stage setting and in acting. The surprising thing is that in its modern point of view it might have been written this year. Certainly no other play of 1935 can possibly be more up-to-date.

Besides the two other plays of Galsworthy mentioned above, Mr. Lion has produced in other years "The Pigeon," "The Silver Box," "Loyalties," "Escape," "Windos" and "Exiled. A list of all his productions was printed on the program—more than 75 plays, and among the authors are Shaw, Bennett, Aldous Huxley, Phillpotts, Elmer Rice, Pinero, Brieux, Clemence Dane, Ervine, Sutro, Lennox Robinson and others.

• • • •

The general committee that are acting as sponsors for the Galsworthy Festival Season include nearly all the prominent men of letters of London.

In addition to the Galsworthy plays, we have seen in London during the last few days "The Old Ladies,' a dramatization of Hugh Walpole's famous novel of the same name. There are only four persons in the cast; all women. Miss Edith Evans, who made such a brilliant success in Katharine Cornell's production of "Romeo and Juliet" in New York, and who left that play in order to appear in this, made an absolutely unforgettable impression as the terrible and terrifying insane murderer.

Approval Is Seen For Proposed Park

Inspector Enthusiastic Over West Va. Site.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 9.—J. C. Teare, an inspector sent here over the week-end at the request of the U. S. Forestry Service from State Game and Fish Commissioner Cheek's office at Charleston, W. Va., expressed enthusiasm over the proposed national park of Berkeley and Morgan Counties after he had been taken on a tour of the area.

Teare, after he was shown by maps that 15,000,000 persons lived within a 200-mile radius of the park, declared that to be a great factor in the park's favor. As a result, a favorable report is expected to be sent to the U. S. Forestry Service at Washington.

The area involves 117 square miles, embracing 140,000 acres in the mountainous area of southwest Berkeley and southeast Morgan Counties, including the Meadow Branch territory, Spruce Pine Hollow and the area west of Gerardstown, beyond North Mountain.

Office Seekers Asked Opinion Of Roy Braden

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Candidates for the county board in Arlington were questioned as to whether they favored the retention of Roy S. Braden as county manager at a meeting Monday night of the Jefferson District Civic League and the Arlington Ridge Civic Association at Virginia Highlands.

The meeting was marked by a heated debate between A. Dexter Davis and Board Member William E. A. McShea. The questioning of candidates started when Davis asked McShea why he "voted to oust Braden" as county manager about two years ago. McShea answered that he had been theatened with defeat in this election if he voted to discharge the county manager and that he would not allow anyone to threaten him.

Davis then asked who had threateneed him. McShea replied, "Why, it was you, Mr. Davis."

Davis admitted that he had discussed the matter with McShea, but denied he had threatened him. He declared what he told McShea was a promise that "if you vote against Braden you need not expect any help from the people of my district."

The clash ended when McShea declared that he had "too much Scotch-Irish in me to be intimidated."

Other candidates for the county board who declared that if they were "called upon tonight to vote," they would retain Braden in office were Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, F. Freeland Chew, Leo C. Lloyd and C. W. Lee.

The meeting also was addressed by County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse and his opponent, Harry A. Fellows. Jesse was charged by Fellows with not collecting taxes from big property owners. Jesse read the tax report showing that more delinquent taxes had been collected than anticipated by the county board, of which Fellows is a member. He cited tax payments of various real estate operators and denied that anyone escaped payment of taxes because of friendship. Jesse declared that he did "not sell a man's house because he was unable to pay his taxes on time."

The Arlington Volunteer Fire Department will meet tonight in the firehouse. The building committee will submit plans and specifications for enlarging the present firehouse with a second story.

The Arlington Kiwanis Club will hold a luncheon meeting today at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the devious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of

Picnic Baskets Are Last Word In Convenience

Downtown Store Features Kind That Will Stand Lot of Hard Usage.

By Dudley Harmon,
Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

THOSE WHO would like to see picnicking made easy — and who wouldn't?—will be interested in the picnic baskets on sale at a certain downtown store. These baskets are the last word in comfort and convenience. In the first place, they are made of tweed or wicker, materials which can stand practically an endless amount of bumping around and still look well. They contain plates, spoons, forks, knives and glasses—in short, all the necessities for eating—and are made of a new material called (we never could learn why) "beetle ware."

A mixture of celluloid and glass, this material is practically unbreakable and comes in several different colors. A bottle opener, that all-important article which somebody always forgets to bring along on a picnic, is included in the outfit, as well as a thermos bottle. Also salt and pepper holders and a tin box guaranteed to keep sandwiches fresh. The hampers are roomy, without being bulky, and will fit nicely into the back seat of your car. They range in price from $15 to $40, depending on their size. They should go far toward simplifying the picnic problem by eliminating the messy parcels and grease-stained bags which usually accompany outdoor eating.

For Outdoor Siestas.

WHILE ON the subject of picnics, it might be appropriate to mention the new "beach rolls" which a downtown department store is featuring. Made of waterproof damask, these beach rolls resemble mattresses, and can be spread out anywhere for that all-important morning nap or afternoon siesta. They are called "rolls" because they can be rolled up and carried from place to place with no trouble at all. They come in several different colors, and are decorated with all sorts of amusing nautical designs. Prices range from $1.95 to $3.50. We recommend them to all those fellow-sufferers who have attempted al fresco napping with a rock sticking into their spine and sand creeping into their eyes.

Something New in Lipsticks.

DISPROVING the adage there is nothing new under the sun, a local department store has just put out something exciting in lipsticks—a combination mirror and lip rouge. It is no whit bigger or bulkier than the ordinary lipstick, as the mirror is so attached as to take up no extra room. When you take off the cover, presto, out flies a little crescent-shaped reflector, and there you are, all set, with no fumbling around for a compact or a pocket mirror. The mirror folds back when not in use. No need to worry about breaking, for it is made of metal. This new gadget comes in three colors of case—black, red and blue—and in four shades of lip rouge—light, medium, raspberry red and terra cotta. A refill comes with it, and the whole outfit costs only $1.50.

Interesting Perfume Exhibit.

WE ARE one of those miserly people who never buy expensive perfume without feeling that most of our money is going to pay for the manufacturer's name, and very little for the scent itself. But after viewing an interesting perfume exhibit in the window of a local department store, we feel that we have been quite childish about the whole matter, and that good perfume is worth all they ask for it. This display describes its manufacture from a to z, and after you see it, you'll wonder no longer why good perfume costs money. It seems that the flowers themselves are only a small part of the ingredients, and that other and rarer materials play an equally important part in its manufacture. Balsams and other exotic materials from the Orient are used to preserve the odor, as, left to themselves, the floral assences would soon evaporate. Civet, from Abyssinia, and musk, from Tibet, are other necessary ingredients. The most important material of all, it seems, is something called ambergris, which, strangely enough, comes from whales. Just to give you an idea of the value of the stuff, the exhibit tells us that a mere 240 pounds of it would cost $66,000. This exhibit was assembled to introduce a famous French perfume which the store is carrying for the first time. It's not exactly cheap, of course, being a product of one of France's most famous houses, but we were lucky enough to get smeared with a little, and it is divine.

Success of Fluffy Omelet Hinges on Slow Cooking

High Temperature Fatal; Skill Required in Removal From Platter.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE statement "that the omelet is the triumph of the egg and that it takes less time to make than the explanation" is true. If you haven't mastered the art of making a perfect omelet get busy and try one today.

This point of perfection is one upon which persons disagree. The French like an omelet soft and thick. To make such an omelet the eggs are beaten together slightly with a fork. There are just as many gourmets who prefer the foamy or puffy omelet. To make a puffy omelet the eggs are beaten separately.

We all agree upon one point, an omelet, French or puffy, is a temperamental dish and should be eaten as soon as it has been popped onto a hot platter. This is one time when the cook can show a little temperment, too. If husbands know what is good for them, they will never finish the baseball scores when dinner is announced on omelet night.

And why such a hullabaloo about an omelet? Here are ten good reasons and each one means a simply prepared, especially enticing meal for hot summer evenings. Take your choice of one of these variations but be sure to start with a perfect omelet: Plus—

1. Grated cheese
2. Creamed meats—best bets, chipped beef, ham or chicken
3. Broiled sausage links
4. Jelly or marmalade
5. Sweetened fresh fruits berries in particular)
6. Vegetables of almost any kind or combination—peas, corn, asparagus, tomatoes, all are good
7. Sweetbreads (creamed or a la king)
8. Mushrooms (creamed or broiled)
9. Chicken livers in cream sauce
10. Canned fruit or cooked dried fruits

Puffy Omelet.

Six large eggs will make a sizable omelet. Beat the yolks until lemon colored, then add the salt (¾ teaspoon) and pepper (⅛ teaspoon). Beat the egg whites until dry, adding ¼ cup of water when half beaten, and thoroughly fold the yokes into them. Pour the mixture into a hot frying pan in which is melted two tablespoons of butter.

Eggs must never cook at too high a temperature. Cover the omelet and cook over a low fire two minutes, then remove the lid and cook about six minutes longer until the omelet. Beat the yolks until lemon browned on the bottom.

Now put the omelet in a slow oven (325° F.) until the top is firm to touch. The omelet is ready to take out if, when touched, it will not stick to your fingers.

To remove the omelet from the pan requires skill. The hot platter must be in readiness. Then one grasps the handle of the pan firmly in the left hand and loosens the edges of the omelet with a spatula. The top half, that nearest the handle, is to be folded over onto the lower half. To make it fold easily, cut the omelet where the fold is going to be. But watch the knife. Do not cut all the way through, except at each edge. When you succeed in folding the halves together, loosen the bottom half and, inverting a hot platter over the top of the frying pan, transfer the folded omelet onto the platter. Take it slowly and easily the first time, and, after a few tries, it is as easy as flipping flapjacks.

Remember that the success of a puffy omelet is largely dependent upon the cooking. If overcooked or cooked at too high a temperature, the omelet will be flat and tough.

'Worry Self Sick' Found True Adage

Doctor Tells How Emotions Regulate Health.

The old expression, "worry one's self sick," contains medical truth, according to Dr. H. Flanders Dunbar of the Columbia University School of Medicine.

Worry not only leads to the hospital and to chronic invalidism, but also hastens death, according to Dr. Dunbar. Speaking before a recent meeting of the American Psychiatric Association she told how the emotions retard recovery from broken bones and heart trouble. She cited the case of a woman who has been an invalid for 18 years and how as a result of her mastery of her emotions her blood pressure dropped, indigestion disappeared and heart pains eased.

Another chronic invalid who stopped worrying looked many years younger, according to Dr. Dunbar, because a spasmodic tenseness went out of her muscles and permitted her facial lines to smooth out.

Cotton Gown Is Practical And Flattering to Wear

Pattern No. 931.

THIS cotton evening frock is practical for warm weather, yes. But it's more than that. It makes the wearer look as slim as can be, as cool as mint, and as fresh and festive as the party itself.

The "boa," the one fluffy touch on the dress, may be of matching fabric or contrasting organdie. It ties on with a big or little bow, and can be doffed for greater simplicity. Notice, too, the new uneven hemline, smart and graceful.

Organdie, lace, pique, gingham, net, eyelet batiste—all economical cottons are suitable fabrics for this pattern. There are just six pieces in the pattern envelope, plus a large, clear instruction chart. Accurately cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 16 (34) requires 5¼ yards for the dress, 3¾ yards for the lei both 35-inch fabric).

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Recess Believed in Order in 10 Days' Discussion of Radio Program.

By Mary Haworth.

APPROXIMATELY eight columns out of the past ten, devoted to a consideration of "This Business of Living," have been given over, as my readers no doubt recall, to letters from readers who have been discussing, with varying degrees of vehemence, the feasibility and possibility of changing the nature of present-day radio programs.

• • • •

In the meantime, other mail dealing with other types of problems, has been accumulating. And so, with today's letter, written by a woman who seems to possess that pleasing sense of proportion which goes hand-in-hand with a nice sense of humor, and who believes, apparently, there are always two sides to a discussion with something to be said for both sides, I am proposing to bring the discussion to a close, or at least to recess it for a time. If other letters dealing with radio should, nevertheless, be forthcoming, we shall renew the discussion in a few days. M. H.

She "Rests Her Ears."

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: No sooner had I read the letter from "Fed-Up" in your column of July 1, assailing the faults of present-day radio broadcasts, than I started to write out my indorsement of her stand. But my typewriter ribbon got so badly tangled up that by the time I got it straightened out I was ready to abandon the effort. However, in the meantime I have read a news item to the effect that women's organizations are making a concerted effort to improve radio programs and I now notice that the topic has been revived in your column by other correspondents.

My reaction to much of the advertising propaganda disseminated over the radio, as well as in newspapers and periodicals, is similar to that expressed by "Fed-Up," who said, "I have even reached the state where I refuse to buy a certain product whose makers have, by their preposterus claims, grossly insulted my intelligence so many times I resent the very name of their product."

• • • •

Some of the claims made by advertisers are extravagant on the very face of them, and others prove on trial not to be borne out. As a result, one comes to discount all such claims and to suppose that they represent merely the continuity writer's fluency in the use of hyperbole.

• • • •

However, as to the programs, I find it possible by familiarizing myself with the programs printed in the daily paper, to find much that is to my taste. When I find nothing of the kind, I take occasin to "rest my ears," as my husband says, until something else comes on the air I wish to listen to.

It seems to me there is a tendency for two, or even three, of the local broadcasting stations to offer the same type of program at the same hour of day, even, sometimes, on both stations of the same broadcasting company. And that, I think, could and should be avoided.

• • • •

I have sometimes wondered if it would not be practicable, especially where a broadcasting company has more than one outlet, to devote one station to one type of program and the other to a different type. Then a listener, like myself, who would risk breaking her neck to get to the radio and turn it off when a string quartet is suddenly succeeded by a "Wah-wah" trio or jazz band, could tune in on the station providing the program more to her liking and be perfectly happy.

• • • •

I like a few of the dramatic serial sketches, although these tend to be too long drawn out, thereby deteriorating in interest and quality as they approach the end. In the matter of Sunday programs I am in accord with "Radio Reformer" who wrote, in your column of July 5: "What a relief it would be to dial in the radio at any hour on Sunday, knowing you were going to hear some inspiring talk, some program of fine classic music or even some of the old-time hymns."

• • • •

I am mindful of the fact that the radio serves a diversity of listeners and I believe those formulating the programs work hard to supply what the public wants. There is no doubt they bring to us many wonderful artists whom many of us would never hear otherwise. The advertising, under present conditions, is necessary and can be a definite service in itself; but too rarely is it anything more than ballyhoo, in the swallowing of which we have to use so many grains of salt that we are in great danger of developing hardening of the gullibility. Sincerely yours,

E. L. M.

U. S. Could Learn a Lot From History Of Spain, Fordham Professor Believes

An authority on Spanish and Hispano-American history, Miss Marie Madden, of the Fordham University faculty, believes modern leaders of the United States could profit by a thorough knowledge of Spanish policies in building a new civilization in America. Miss Madden was a speaker at the fourth annual seminar-conference on Hispano-American affairs, still being held at George Washington University.

Spiritual Phase Neglected in New Deal, Miss Madden Asserts.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF IT IS TRUE that "history is philosophy teaching by examples," historians should hold the keys to solving many modern problems. Certainly it would seem a knowledge of backgrounds and formative agencies of successful civilizations should be essential in reorganizing or constructing any civilization.

Miss Marie Madden, professor of Spanish and Hispanic-American history at Fordham University, is of this opinion. A speaker at the Fourth Annual Seminar-Conference on Hispanic-American Affairs, now being held at George Washington University, she has delivered lectures the last two days on the European background of Spanish civilization as it is shown today in Hispanic-American life.

Yesterday, after her lecture, she went a step further and pointed out ways the United States, in its period of reorganizatiop, could learn a few lessons from the Spaniards, who gave the Indians new standards of civilization.

Discussing the New Deal, she mentioned that "any great sociological experiment is a New Deal. Most countries are having one today in one way or another. The Indians had one hundreds of years ago when they were conquered by the Spaniards."

Benefited All Concerned.

That "New Deal" was successful and worked out to the advantage of all concerned, chiefly because "the Spaniards judged life in the light of religious principles," she explained.

She pointed out, also, that no economic, no social institution was carried over from Spain to America without due consideration whether it would enable the Indian to live a good Catholic life.

"Yet today, in reorganizing our country, in 'making over' our institutions and changing our customs, nothing apparently is reckoned on a religious basis," she said, and then went on to explain that a case in point was the New Deal plan to insure every working man a living wage. "The chief reason given for this was that industry could afford to pay bigger wages, and should do so, in order that an economic balance could be established between capital and labor. But back in the days when Hispanic-America was being organized, such a problem was to have been glimpsed from an entirely different angle. Not from the standpoint of industry at all, but in regard to the individual and his chances for leading a more wholesome, more religious life—if he had a living wage."

Continuing in this vein and calling attention to a number of other problems attacked from "the wrong angle," Miss Madden pointed out that "the chief trouble with the civilization we are trying to build on the New Deal plan is that it is unbalanced; there's too much emphasis on economic values and not enough on spiritual ones."

Two Groups Absorbed.

In contrast, working on a religious rather than an economic basis, the Spanish absorbed two groups of aliens—first the Moors, then the Indians—and built enviable civilizations on both sides of the Atlantic, she furher explained.

"Yet today, we are prone to believe foundations are upset as they have never been before," she said. "On all sides we see societies in dissolution or in transformation. The changes recently brought about in the United States are causing us to question whether we—now only about 150 years old—are not too old to go on because we bear the marks of a rigid framework and have apparently lost the power to adapt ourselves to inevitable mutations.

"Compared with Spain at the time of the origin of Hispanic-America the United States is an infant today. But whether we shall be able to profit by our youth, reorganize our civilization and establish institutions comparable to those still observed in Hispanic-America remains to be seen. In my opinion, our country could learn much from the history of Spain."

Drop in Accidents To Children Noted

1933 Figures 23% Below Those of 1924.

Children have steadily improved their accident record since 1924, Safety Education reports. In 1933, 23 per cent less children were injured than in 1924.

Motor vehicles make up 32 per cent of the child accident death total, reaching a peak in the 5 to 9 age group. Burns cause most accidental deaths among children from 1 to 4.

Drownings rank third as causes of accidental death. The largest number are in the 1 to 4 age group—probably occurring in homes—although there are many drownings of older children in public places.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

IF JULY 10 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 11:30 a. m., to 1:30 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m.

If a woman and July 10 is your birthday, you probably value love, friendship and peace of mind more than anything else. A domestic life has possibly greater appeal to you than a commercial or artistic career, though you are of the type that might make a great success in either. You possess the gift of winning friends, as well as the ability to placate those inclined to be antagonistic. You will possibly never have any trouble in finding a satisfactory solution to problems relating to money. Married life should be a medium through which your greatest contentment is apt to be found.

If a man and July 10 is your natal day, to you, knowledge rather than money, is power, and through your mental attainments you may become financially independent. The Army or Navy, pulpit, lecture platform, as well as the pen and brush, are more than likely to be instrumental in your gaining enviable recognition.

Gold Used In Healing For Centuries

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE are not many physicians who have had an extensive experience with gold as a medium of exchange. Nevertheless, this metal for centuries has been credited with possessing magic virtues when applied to disease. In describing the Doctour of Physike, Chaucer, in the "Canterbury Tales," says:

"For gold in physick is a cordiall,
Therefore he loved gold in special."

An early mention of the medical value of gold classifies it as a blood purifier. At one time pills of all sorts were covered with gold on the theory that the metal added to the efficacy of the pill. With the appearance, however, of that genius-mountebank, Paracelsus, gold was exalted as the sovereign remedy for almost everything. It was hailed as an antidote in poisoning, was said to prevent miscarriage in woman, and was placed in the mouth of a newborn babe so that the devil would not acquire power over the child. The famous "elixir of life" which this physician prepared is said to have been a mixture of gold and corrosive sublimate—a perfectly horrible poisonous concoction. Even Robert Boyle in his "Sceptical Chymist" wrote that, although he was prejudiced against it, he had known such wonderful cures resulting from potable gold that he was compelled to bear witness to its efficacy.

About 10 years ago Prof. Mollgaard, of Copenhagen, stated that the thiosulphate of gold and sodium would destroy the bacillus of tuberculosis and that changes in the progress of the disease followed its administration. He called the compound sanocrysin, meaning to heal with gold. On the whole his successes with this method were small and now and then there were fatal results.

The most dynamic effects of gold injections were reported in arthritis with multiple swellings of the small joints in patients of all ages. At first the dose used is very tiny, but is gradually increased until the patient has received 15 to 18 grains. After a month's rest a second course of approximately the same amount is given. These courses are repeated at intervals, depending upon signs of improvement. If unusual reactions appear the period between doses is lengthened. During the administration of the drug the patient is on a fasting or a low diet. Strangely enough, it is advised that both sulphur and calcium be given during the period in which the patient is receiving the gold injections. Physiotherapy and hot baths also are employed. Those who advocate the method state that there is marked diminution of swelling and pain and increased movements of the joints.

While the value of gold in tuberculosis has not been generally accepted, it may be an important aid in treatment in certain cases of arthritis. It is, however, a dangerous drug—one that can bring on distressing symptoms and complications, and it should not be employed generally until more facts are available.

Study Shows Vitamin A Is Necessary for Adults

Adults and elderly persons have special need of vitamin A, a study recently conductly by Prof. Arthur H. Smith and Dr. A. U. Orten, of Yale University, has brought out. The study, carried out on albino rats, showed that as the animals became older greater quantities of vitamin A were required to keep them in a healthful condition. The study also showed that the older rats needed a storage of vitamin A to draw upon in physical emergency.

Varied Models and Materials Used for Midseason Wraps

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 9.—Variety is the summer slogan for the new midseason wraps.

They come in wool, silk and a new plush-like velvet, in lengths which range from the knee to the hem, in silhouettes which flare or wrap and in colors which run from sober black to vivid red.

Silk coats—generally taffeta—are favored for warm summer days in town. One designer makes three-quarter length redingotes to top his dark taffeta frocks, another displays full-length pebbled taffeta cut on a collarless line with big topped sleeves and a third fashions a long coat of brown plush-like velvet.

Everyone is making loose-backed three-quarter length printed crepe models to accompany frocks of the same fabric and colored five-eighth length coats with full swagger backs are shown by several designers.

Leather leaves are a new fastening which give this season's models chic. Schiaparelli uses blue sharkskin ones to fasten a dark blue coat and Patou clips two green leather clovers to the front of a black model.

A lining of contrasting color is sponsored by some designers. Molyneux finishes a simple black wool with a lining of sandy beige crepe extending out over the coat to form a very narrow, long collar. Fur appears on a few of the dressier dark models, generally being used on the sleeves, as a band of gray fox bordering the full elbow length sleeves of a black or navy blue coat.

Utilities 'Death' Clause in New Test by Senate

speech for utility holding company elimination.

It was a speech familiar to him from much anti-utility campaigning in West Virginia and he delivered it confidently in a loud voice that carried to the farthermost gallery recesses.

"A holding company is nothing more than a device by which State regulation is escaped, Federal regulation is dodged, the investor is skinned and the consumer is gouged," he concluded.

A letter from Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, charged with administration of the act, strongly protesting against the House substitute for the "death sentence," was read by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana.

"These duties, while enormous, can be discharged, I believe, with reasonable efficiency by a trained and competent personnel; but the burden cast upon us by Section 11 of the House bill is simply staggering," Chairman Kennedy wrote.

Fears Poor Results.

"I can not be too vehement in urging upon you my feelings that this section, as now drawn, is most unfortunate. I urge my objections to this section upon two grounds. The first is simply the limitations on human capacity to achieve results. The second objection is based upon my conception of what is wisdom in government."

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson joined Senator Wheeler in attacking the House bill upon constitutional grounds. Delegation of sweeping authority to the Securities and Exchange Commission to eliminate "unnecessary" holding companies, they argued, would almost certainly be invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Senator Dieterich countered that this was the basis of his original objection to the Senate bill. He said he was opposing the "death sentence" because in his opinion it violated the Constitution and the Democratic party platform.

Debate Grows Personal.

The debate took a personal twist after Dieterich said it was necessary to understand the philosophy of the Progressives which met in Cleveland in 1924 and nominated the late Senator Robert M. La Follette for President and Senator Wheeler for Vice President, on a public ownership platform, in order to understand the philosophy behind the bill.

"They advocated a constitutional amendment giving Congress the power to reenact legislation over a judicial veto," Dieterich said. "They advocated the popular election of judges, making them directly responsible to the people. They would revolutionize and destroy the Constitution of the fathers, and tear the veil from the goddess of justice."

Wheeler retorted that he was "getting weary of these references to my political philosophy."

Proud He Ran on Ticket.

"The fact that I ran on the same ticket with Bob La Follette gives me greater pride than anything I have ever done. I don't care what the Chicago democracy thinks about my democracy."

Senator Robinson begged the Senators not "to descend to the level of mediocre personalities."

"Does the Senator mean the mediocre level of personalities?" asked Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky.

"No, I meant what I said," shouted Robinson.

Wheeler delivered a lengthy assault on alleged power propaganda, and declared that newspapers throughout the country, especially the small country weeklies, were carrying large utility company advertisements, and following these up with editorials against the "death sentence."

The Montanan was cross-examined by Senators James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri (Democrats), about newspaper stories quoting Wheeler as saying he would vote to kill the bill without the "death sentence" feature.

Misquoted, Wheeler Says.

When Wheeler declared he was misquoted, he was asked if he would seek to overcome differences with the House in conference, and report out a bill regardless of the fate of the "death sentence."

The Montanan replied that he would prefer no legislation at all to a bill without the "death sentence," but regarded it his duty as a conferee to bring out the best bill he could get.

Robinson assailed the Dieterich motion instructing conferees not to insist on the Senate amendment as an "extraordinary thing."

"Never in the history of the Senate since I have been here has the Senate adopted a proposition and then informed its conferees that it wasn't in earnest and would not insist," he said.

Chairman Kennedy, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in his letter to Senator Wheeler, said the administrative burdens imposed under the House bill "will just be overwhelming, no matter what the appropriation, no matter the size or the technical equipment of the staff."

Supplies No Guide, He Says.

"The phrase 'public interest' is not defined in the House bill," Kennedy wrote. "Thus this bill furnishes no effective standard to guide the commission in the momentous decision it must make as to which of the holding company systems are to be broken up and how such process is to be effected. I do not believe it is fair or practical to expect any five men to shoulder the grave responsibility for deciding which of these systems are to be reorganized into what size and character the ultimate groupings are evolved."

Senator Holt, apologizing at the outset for making a speech after so short a membership in the chamber, said he took the floor because West Virginia "has been represented as being in favor of elimination of the so-called death sentence."

"I disagree with that, and believe that my State is behind the President for the Senate bill," he said.

He said in the last four years "there has been no more ruthless, no more un-American and no more un-Democratic group than the utilities."

Hit-and-Run Chase Reward Presented

Sidney Berman Receives $50 Prize From A. A. A.

Rewarding him for a 20-block chase after a hit-skip driver, the American Automobile Association, District of Columbia Motor Club, yesterday presented a $50 prize to Sidney Berman, of 1109 Mount Olivet road.

The reward, a standing offer by the club to anyone bringing about the arrest of a hit-and-run motorist, was paid in recognition of his action in apprehending the driver of the car that struck and seriously injured Napoleon Hill, a newspaper delivery boy.

In making the award, the club pointed out that after August 1, when provisions of the safety-responsibility law becomes effective, conviction of hit-skip drivers not only will carry a stiff jail sentence, but also will result in suspension of driving privileges until the convicted driver has established his financial responsibility to the extent of $1,000.

'Communism Is Idiocy,' Wrote Mark Twain on Tour in 1878

New York, July 9.—Mark Twain was shown tonight to have had little respect for communism.

Hitherto unpublished notes and diaries, printed in the current issue of Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan, record the late humorist and philosopher as having jotted down the following observation during a tour of Europe in 1878:

"Communism is idiocy. They want to divide up the property. Suppose they did it—it requires brains to keep money as well as to make it. In a precious little while the money would be back in the former owner's hands and the communist would be poor again. The division would have to be re-made every three years or it would do the communist no good."

In one of his earlier notebooks there appeared the memorandum which became the basis of his jumping frog story. It follows:

"Coleman with his jumping frog—bet a stranger $50.—Stranger had no frog and C. got him one;—In the meantime stranger filled C.'s frog full of shot and he couldn't jump. The stranger's frog won."

The memorandum was written while Twain, whose real name was Samuel L. Clemens, was in Angel's Camp, Calif. He went there after succumbing to the gold fever and complained repeatedly in his diary of "rain, beans and dish water."

He became fond of composing maxims, and in one notebook he wrote:

"Never refuse to do a kindness unless the act would work great injury to yourself, and never refuse to take a drink—under any circumstances."

Flood Water Is Receding In Maryland

Road Commission Rushes Repair Job

Bridges Swept Away Crops Hard Hit; No Lives Lost.

By the Associated Press.

Havre de Grace, Md., July 9.—Flood waters sent coursing over northeastern Maryland by nocturnal cloudbursts receded today as residents of the section splashed about seeking to determine just what damage had been done.

Reports from all sections of the affected area were that no lives were lost and that no persons suffered injury during the flood. Property damage will run into thousands of dollars but no attempt had been made today to estimate it.

From first reports it appeared that the storm had centered in northeastern Maryland, but advices tonight from St. Marys County in the southern part of the State were that roads and bridges there had been damaged to the extent of $15,000.

Roads officials reported that a major portion of the road between Leonardtown and Great Mills had been washed out; that the bridge at Sotterly was down and that bridges at Leonardtown and Great Mills had lost their underpinnings.

Residents of shores at Great Mills Run in St. Marys County had to leave their homes early today when water from the river there invaded their homes.

Traffic between Baltimore and Philadelphia was allowed to pass on a one-lane basis after being tied up for more than 12 hours. Roads still were blocked in some rural areas, however.

Bridges Swept Away.

In Baltimore, Chief Engineer Nathan L. Smith of the State Roads Commission received reports that two bridges had been swept away and that four others were closed because of their weakened condition. There was damage to highways in some sections but detailed reports were not immediately available.

Crops throughout the affected area suffered heavily. Stands of wheat, hay and corn in lowlands were swept away and crops on higher land were beaten flat by the driving rain. One observer reported that some of the crops were so flat "it looked like a steam roller had been driven through the fields."

The roads commission swung into action immediately in its drive to repair storm damage. Smith said that more than 100 maintenance men had been moved into the Elkton area and that others would be sent where needed.

Cellars Flooded.

Cellars in more than 300 homes here and in Elkton were flooded and firemen spent the day pumping water out of houses instead of into them, as is the usual practice with firemen. One store here, owned by L. H. Klair, was flooded and the owner reported damage would be about $2,000. Food products in the cellar were ruined.

The Philadelphia road near here was under five feet of rushing water for a time this morning. The Pennsylvania Railroad roadbed at Swan Creek was reported damaged by more than two feet of water and traffic between Baltimore and Wilmington, Del., was halted for about three hours.

Tracks of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Temple road crossing were under water for a while. A concrete watch house there was upset by the water.

Lawrence L. Boyd, chief of police here, termed the flood "one of the worst" that ever struck this section. He said the failure of two six-foot concrete drainage pipes to take off the surplus water caused the flooding of the town.

At Elkton, Chief Deputy Sheriff Lewis A. Seth said heavy damage, especialy to crops, resulted in the rural sections of Cecil County. Danger in that section is past, however, he said, unless there are further rains in the immediate future.

Elks Plan Trips For Convention

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 9.—A trip to the scene of John Brown's trial at Charles Town and another to the Potomac River at Shepherdstown where James Rumsey is claimed to have operated the first steamboat have been placed in the program for the coming convention of West Virginia Elks.

Historic sites will be visited on an automobile tour of the Eastern Panhandle section the first day, including visits to Charles Town, Shepherdstown and Berkeley Springs.

More than 1,000 Elks are expected to attend the convention.

Parents Asked To Back Change In Curriculum

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., July 9.—Parental support of proposed curriculum changes in the State public school system was urged in yesterday's opening session here of the five-day conference of the Virginia Co-operative Education Association.

In discussing provisions of the revised methods of instruction, Mrs. C. E. Roe, field secretary for the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, stressed the need of an "informed and intelligent parenthood" in supporting the new curriculum, and asked that each local organization study its principles.

The Co-operative Education Association is the central organziation of parent-teacher groups, and is the State branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The association as a whole has indorsed the movement of the State department of education to revise committee set up by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction, is working here on the final draft of the new curriculum, with the view of introducing it in the school system next fall.

In today's session, Dr. E. L. Fox, of Randolph-Macon College, told how parents could benefit from the extension service of State colleges and universities.

Tomorrow a conference on the work of the Department of Education will be directed by J. L. Blair Buck, State supervisor of teaching personnel. Mrs. A. P. Staples, of Richmond, will be the principal speaker in a session devoted to home service.

Thursday's conferences on the work of the departments of health and public affairs will be led by Nancy Vance, of Richmond, and Dr. Fox. At the closing session Friday, Dr. W. T. Sanger, of Richmond, will lead discussions on the association's State-wide work.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 9.—Roy Payton, 32, is dead of shock from an ordinary light circuit at the Akro Agate Co.'s factory here, where he was employed. Rarely does such a shock prove fatal, officials of the company said.

Payton was putting galvanized roofing on the plant roof and was oiling an electric drill when he received the shock.

2d Maryland Town Fights Skunk Army

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hancock, Md., July 9.—Hancock is prepared to turn to Sharpsburg for tactical procedure following an invasion of an army of skunks. A few years ago Sharpsburg had the same trouble and waged a successful sortie against the odorous mammal, so Constable Charles A. Barnhart is planning to go there for advice.

"We can't kill them right here in town," he explained.

The skunks have been ruining gardens and shrubbery and making themselves generally obnoxious. The first attack of the skunks came about a month ago. Their numbers have been greatly multiplied since.

Woman Saved Trying to Hang Herself in Cell

Makes Noose of Stockings After Arrest on Charge of Disorderly Conduct.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., July 9.—The shouts of other prisoners in the Cumberland police station today were responsible for saving the life of a 28-year-old woman prisoner who attempted to hang herself with a silk stocking.

Spectators and officers were attracted to the station by the outcries of the men prisoners, who said they were alarmed at the sound of choking groans coming from the cell occupied by Mrs. Ann Oglebay, arrested a short time before on a disorderly conduct charge.

Patrolmen from the police court offices across the square entered the cell and found the young woman slowly strangling. She had improvised a noose with stockings and stepped from the cell cot.

Dr. Thomas W. Koon, summoned by officers, worked over Mrs. Oglebay for an hour before she was revived. At Allegany Hospital, it was said she would recover.

Wheat Harvests Set Records.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 9.—With the threshing of Washington County's wheat crop in progress, several record yields have been reported. One yield of 45 bushels to the acre was reported by Stanley Kline, Benevola. Frank Showalter, Maugansville, reported a yield of 42 bushels to the acre.

Paralysis List Now Totals 79; Isolation Urged

Virginia Health Authorities Advise Children to Avoid Crowds.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 9.—With a total of 79 infantile paralysis cases reported in Virginia since June 1, health authorities in Old Dominion cities today emphasized the advisability of keeping children from crowds, and one town had barred youngsters from public places.

The announcement that Blackstone had forbidden children to attend public gatherings came today as eight new cases were added to the previous total of 71. Fifteen cases were reported in Richmond.

The cases reported today were three from Richmond, one each from the counties of Nansemond, Pittsylvania, Alleghany and two from Halifax County.

At Roanoke, Dr. C. B. Ransone, municipal health officer, advised citizens to cancel prolonged trips to North Carolina and to request friends in that State to postpone visits to Virginia.

The lone case at Norfolk, a girl who came there from North Carolina, was under medical care and the only family she had come in contact with was quarantined.

Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said his office and health authorities of North Carolina maintained a constant exchange of information. The disease in Virginia thus far has been confined almost entirely to the south side.

Relief Chief Mum On Ouster Demand

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., July 9.—Relief Administrator William N. Beehler, who has weathered many attacks on his position in the past two years, refused tonight to discuss Charles K. Payne's demand for his resignation.

Payne, chairman of the State relief board, said the former Kentuckian had refused to quit and asked Gov. Kump to demand that he leave.

The Governor, who has maintained a West Virginian should have the relief post, said the Federal Government furnishes a large part of the funds and the matter will have to be decided by its representatives.

C. L. Allen, director of the works division, whose resignatoin the board rejected last night, declared relations with Beehler had no bearing on his desire to quit.

License War Cuts Gas Sale In West Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 9.—Filling station operators here and in the Eastern Panhandle are complaining over loss of business in the truck license "war" with neighboring States. The West Virginia law, requiring out-of-State "for hire" trucks to obtain special permits for operatior in West Virginia, went into effect July 1, and retaliatory action has followed.

Where the stream of heavy-duty trucks through this section formerly was heavy, an out-of-State truck is now rarely seen, the operators complain. To these business men the trucks, many of them taking on as much as 50 gallons at a fill, were a source of principal business. Several of the larger filling stations here, with many customers among the truckers, have been advised the trucks hereafter will be routed either south through Virginia, north through Pennsylvania or east through Maryland.

"The West Virginia Legislature," one filling station man said today, "cut off its own nose in passing that law. It seems to have forgotten that each gallon of gas which those big trucks bought brought in 4 cents to the State in taxes. A few fill-ups for the big trucks would more than pay the permit fee which the State imposed on them. Now the gasoline tax is lost to the State; it gets no permit fee, and gas station operators are left holding the bag with the State."

Orchardists now beginning to move their Transparent apples are afraid to send out their trucks. There seems no way of determining from day to day what the new requirements of the warring States will be. Trucks hauling orchard and farm produce, unprocessed, are exempt from the West Virginia law requiring permits for out-of-State "for hire" trucks; but in the confusion and apprehension following the new law and the license "war," the general tendency is for all trucks to avoid West Virginia, and truckers here also are afraid to move out of the State. Several instances have been reported where people wished to move their household goods, but have been unable to hire moving vans because the operators are unwilling to venture out into the "war" zone.

Commercial Trucks Purchase State Tags

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 9.—Virginia has made "a great many" West Virginia commercial truck operators purchase State tags since abrogation of the reciprocal agreement several days ago, John Q. Rhodes, motor vehicle commissioner, said today.

Instructions have been issued not to make arrests but to enforce the purchase of tags by West Virginia trucks, Mr. Rhodes stated.

No figures were available today on the number of trucks stopped or on possible arrests for refusal to comply with the ruling, motor vehicle officials pointing out that reports from various officials have not yet had time to reach them.

Colored Training School Opens.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, Va., July 9.—The Instructors' Training School for Negroes, a part of the new State-wide plan for instruction, particularly in the trades, of youths out of school and unemployed, opened yesterday at the Virginia State College for Negroes in this city with an enrollment the first day of 45. It is expected that the enrollment will reach 60.

Hangs Self With Shirt.

Baltimore, July 9 (AP).—Joseph G. Schorr, 59-year-old prisoner in the city jail, hanged himself from a cell bar yesterday, using his shirt in lieu of a rope. Schorr was being held for the grand jury on charges of criminal assault. Efforts to revive him failed.

Road Policy Change Made In Dominion

No Funds Now Devoted to Highways Taken Over by U. S.

Vast Areas Embraced in Submarginal, Lake Section Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 9.—The State Highway Department is making no allocations for construction on sections of secondary roads lying in submarginal areas which the Federal Government has taken over or will take over, Commissioner Henry G. Shirley disclosed today.

This policy, applying also to proposed Federal parks and forest reservations, was adopted, he said, because the Government has indicated a desire to keep such areas in as near a natural condition as possible.

Furthermore, he said, little good would come from the building of roads in unpopulated sections.

Thousands of acres of Virginia land are passing into the hands of the Federal Government under the submarginal program. Counties embraced or to be embraced are Prince Edward, Buckingham, Henry, Appomattox, Halifax, Chesterfield, Pittsylvania, Cumberland and Franklin.

In addition there is a vast section of the State, estimated at 2,000,000 acres, which the Federal Government proposes to take over and incorporate into what is known as the mountain lake area. This embraces land in many counties, most of them bordering on West Virginia.

3 Youths Fined In Assault Case

$500 Penalties Levied at Annapolis.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., July 9.—Fines of $500 and suspended sentences of three years in the Maryland house of correction were meted out in Circuit Court here today to three youths charged with criminally assaulting a young Halethorpe woman.

Dennis Knight and James Kramm, both 20, who with Robert Knight, 18, were charged with the crime, pleaded guilty to common assault before Judge Linwood L. Clark today. Robert Knight, Dennis' brother, was convicted last week of common assault.

State's Attorney Roscoe C. Rowe had asked the death penalty in each case. Judge Clark had deferred sentencing Robert Knight pending trial of his companions.

In default of fine, the youths would serve four months in the county jail.

It was testified during the trial last week that the trio had taken the girl from a stranded automobile on the Washington boulevard, offering to drive her to her home. The car in which she had been riding with friends had run out of gas.

$53,500 Fines Assessed; One 9-Month Sentence Is Suspended.

Ex-Dry Agent Given 2 Years and $5,000

Defense Lawyers Work on Appeals; Bail Is Continued.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., July 9.—While defense attorneys worked on appeals, Judge John Paul today imposed prison sentences aggregating 239 months and fines totaling $53,500 on convicted participants in Franklin County's gigantic liquor conspiracy.

Bail which had been given previously was continued until September 3 while attorneys went through 9,000 pages of the lengthy record in preparing appeals.

Edgar A. Beckett, of Calloway, a former State prohibition officer, received the heaviest sentence, 2 years and $5,000 fine, while Henry T. Abshire, of Boone Mill, deputy sheriff, was sentenced to 18 months and fined $3,000.

Other sentences:

Samuel O. White, former Federal prohibition investigator stationed in Roanoke, 18 months and $2,000.

Walter Hatcher, alias "Pee" Hatcher, of near Ferrum; T. Roosevelt Smith, near Ferrum; John and Walter Turner, Henry J. O. Shiveley, Rocky Mount, and Clifford Martin, Rocky Mount, 15 months and $3,000 each.

Willard Hodges, Glade Hill, 15 months and $3,500 fine, $500 to be remitted if the conveyance of Hodges' property to his wife is set aside.

Jack Bess, Roanoke, 15 months and $2,000.

Leonard Davis, Martinsville; Earl Easter and Charlie Quilliams, Roanoke, 9 months and $1,000 each.

Claude Shively, Ferrum, 6 months and $1,000.

Tom Cooper, Galloway, and C. P. Griffith, alias "Cap" Griffith, near Ferrum, 4 months.

David A. Nicholson, of Ferrum, a former member of the Virginia House of Delegates, was sentenced to 9 months and fined $500 but in consideration of his physical condition the sentence was suspended and Nicholson placed on probation.

Six individuals and a corporation pleading nolo contendere were fined:

Nick Prilliman, $3,500; R. P. Debarl, Shooting Creek, $3,500; Guy W. and C. Buford Noland, and Grover Martin, $500 each; Herman Shriveley, $2,500 and the Ferrum Mercantile Co., Inc., $3,000.

Charles C. Greer, former deputy sheriff who pleaded nolo contendere and who testified for the Government, was placed on probation for three years as were three of four men who pleaded guilty, D. Wilson Hodges, former sheriff, and H. J. Wright and Leonard Fralin, both of Union Hall. Tom D. C. Cundiff, of Penhook, is a State convict.

Nice Still Hopes For Bridge Funds

Unconvinced U.S. Will Not Pay All Span Costs.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 9.—Gov. Harry W. Nice has not abandoned hope that the Chesapeake Bay Bridge ultimately may be financed entirely by the Federal Government.

"The door has not been closed," he said. "For the moment the Government appears unwilling to put up the whole amount. There may be a change in attitude. I am hopeful there will be."

Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, yesterday said the Government would require Maryland to furnish 55 per cent of the $10,000,000 estimated cost of the span. Members of the bridge authority probably will visit the Governor within a few days to discuss the problem, it was said.

Dog Breathes Through Nose, Police Wonder If It's Cruelty

Baltimore, July 9.—Brownie is an educated dog. He holds a pipe in his mouth, wears a tin cup around his neck and collects pennies, nickels and dimes for William Benson, his 22-year-old master.

But take it from Miss Mary Shearer, president of the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Brownie breathes through his mouth. Or if he doesn't he should, so Miss Shearer ordered Benson's arrest.

Police were puzzled. Miss Shearer was coming to the police station later to press the charge, but meantime the officers couldn't discover just what Benson had done that constituted cruelty.

They locked the man and the dog in a cell and waited. Finally Miss Shearer called on the telephone.

"What," Sergt. George Bauer asked her, "is the charge?"

"Cruelty to—" began Miss Shearer.

"Yes, but how?" asked the sergeant.

"Dogs breathe through their mouths," the S. P. C. A. president said. "Making this dog hold a pipe in its mouth is cruel."

Sergt. Sauer thanked her, wrote down the charge and called the turnkey. "How," he asked, "is Brownie breathing?"

"Through," said the turnkey, "his nose."

Bernath - Davis Popular Team, Play Requests

Maybe You Can Stump Hamilton's Musicians —and Maybe Not!

Greetings and salutations and all that sort of thing to Pat MacGroary and the new Bernath-Davis combination at Mr. MacGroary's Alexander Room at the Hamilton.

The Bernath half is Bert Bernath, violinist, and the Davis would be Milton Davis, of the piano playing Davises, well known to Washingtonians.

Along with your cocktails some day this week, say about 5 to 7 or 10 to midnight, try the new pastime of trying to stump Messrs. Bernath and Davis with request numbers. That's their specialty and they welcome all comers.

• • • •

We wouldn't think of putting any ideas in your minds, but Bert Bernath is also a vocalist of parts. He sings in German and French as well as garden variety English. Think of the possibilities. "Chasing Shadows" in French! "Serenade to a Wealthy Widow" in German! The more we think of reclining comfortably in a deep lounge with the air-conditioning performing its welcome service and figuring up ways to stump Messrs. Bernath and Davis, the more we like the idea.

To the best of our recollection, there are no lyrics for "Serenade to a Wealthy Widow." But if there were (with that tempo) the German version would be very, very trick.

• • • •

Incidentally, when you drop into the Alexander Room this week, the name is Pat MacGroary. But it's "Mac" to you, not "Pat."

• • • •

Someone is always sticking his neck out with an idea. Somehow this one registers as worthy of consideration. It has to do with Al Norton, who already puts a load of rhythm into introducing the floor shows to the customers at the Lotus Restaurant. It has to do further with the little speech the celebrated master of affairs makes at the conclusion of each performance.

The idea centers about Mr. Norton setting the little closing speech to music. A sort of crooning conclusion as it were. And can Mr. Norton croon? Mr. Norton can.

• • • •

The development of the lyrics presents more of a problem than the musical theme. For example, reflecting on our own declining vocabulary, not every lyricist can rhyme "gigantic cooling system" and "keeps you cool and comfortable," or "shows three times daily" and "brand-new show each Monday."

The idea further includes the line in the theme song that Smiling Bill Strickland should take a bow and suggests that "every night is a regular New Year's Eve" at the Lotus.

• • • •

However, in case you have contracted a mild case of misapprehension about our seriousness in this matter, we believe that a swell job could be done in writing a very smart closing theme for the Lotus floor show. And we know that Al Norton could do a handsome job of musically inviting the folks back for another evening.

• • • •

Ruthania and Malcolm are lingering at the Shoreham another week. Which means only one thing, of course—the people liked them the first week. We already knew that Malcolm was of the Philadelphia "Malcolms," but as we go into this second week we learn that Ruthania's surname is Dilworth, a direct descendant of the Declaration of Independence signing Harts. Which always means Philadelphia to us. In addition to this charming dance team, the Shoreham Terrace offers the Aurette Sisters in waltz numbers.

• • • •

For an evening of complete disillusionment, select a word which you assume is known to every bartender, waiter and chef and try to get a definition. For instance—skittles!

Ever since that classic of geographical word-in-song, "Hills of West Virginia," made its appearance, we've been trying to learn precisely what skittles are. You will recall that the maid from the mountains ultimately lived a life of "beer and skittles."

• • • •

So one evening we approached the bartender at Club Habana's sky-top bar and asked him what a skittle was. He 'lowed as how it probably was a cousin to a pretzel. A waiter never heard of a skittle in some ten years of waitering. Even Host Scott gave it up as bad business.

On we went. Waiters and bartenders at the Gingham Club, Hi-Hat, Lotus and other downtown spots guessed everything from an hors d'oeuver to crackers.

We tried to locate Peter Boras, who introduced us to a new Bacardi cocktail recently at the Madrillon, but he was, unhappily, out.

So we gave it up.

• • • •

• • • •

Barnee means the piano in the lounge at the Shoreham for cocktails there afternoons . . . Those Hawaiians at Griffith Farms are versatile . . . they sing in four languages . . . Hall's Restaurant, way down Southwest way, can fix up a hard-shell crab or a brace of frog legs such as you never had before . . . Tyler and Phillips, Victor and Young and Dorce and Freddie Drow provide a diversified program for Lotus patrons this week . . . And don't fail to have Peter Borras outline the virtues of a Dykaree on your next trip to the Madrillon.

CONTRACT AN EDUCATION

I believe that contract bridge should be a requisite in the education of children and I am readily in favor of having it included in the curriculum of public schools, if for no other reason than that it teaches its students to have such an excellent sense of value.

The man who knows contract bridge soon learns that that which is offered free is often not worth taking, and that the truly valuable things in life, as in an intellectual card game, are the results of one's own efforts rather than the munificence of others.

Saving a Throw-In.

The defenders, particularly at no-trump, should be wary before they cash all their available tricks, unless by so cashing them they can set the contract. Sometimes if a player takes too many tricks he will squeeze his partner; this unusual situation is called the "Suicide Squeeze" and I will discuss it tomorrow. On other occasions a player, by relinquishing an available trick, can save himself from a throwin, and that is exactly what happened when the deal below was played.

South, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠ K Q 9 ♡ J 7 4 ◇ 7 6 4 ♣ K 6 4 2
♠ 10 8 4 ♡ K 9 5 ◇ K Q 10 9 2 ♣ 10 7	W E N S	♠ 7 6 5 ♡ 8 3 2 ◇ 8 5 3 ♣ Q J 8 5
	♠ A J 3 2 ♡ A Q 10 6 ◇ A J ♣ A 9 8

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠(1)	2◇(2)	2♠(3)	Pass
3♡(4)	Pass	3♠(5)	Pass
3NT(6)	Pass	Pass(7)	Pass

1—Except with 4-3-3-3 distribution the suit bid is preferred to no-trump. Some is prepared to reach a game in one of his majors.
2—A dangerous overcall, though as the cards lay West could have been defeated by only three tricks.
3—North's barren distribution makes this a doubtful raise.
4—An inferential forcing bid since if South did not wish to reach game he could have passed two spades in full confidence that the trump suit was satisfactory.
5—North can not pass, so he makes the weakest response available.
6—Now South shows the balanced distribution and assorted strength of his hand.
7—Fearing that ten tricks may be impossible and that nine tricks may be won, North decides to risk the notrump contract.

The Play.

West opened the King of diamonds and South won with his Ace rather than reveal his lack of a second stopper by following with the Jack. After winning the diamond Ace, South ran four rounds of spades, on the fourth of which West discarded the nine of hearts. Sometimes such discards can not be trusted, since a player in West's position will throw a high card from a weak holding in order to make declarer think he is strong in that suit. In this case, however, South decided to trust West's discard because West's bid had marked him with the King of hearts. South then did some counting and decided West had originally held five diamonds, three spades and three hearts, and he must therefore have only two clubs. South proceeded to strip these clubs from West's hand by cashing the Ace and King of clubs. South then played the Jack of diamonds and West, winning the trick with the King was in the lead.

At this point West could have cashed three more diamond tricks, but then he would have had nothing to lead but a heart and a lead of that suit into South's tenace would have lost the game. Rather than give up, West did not cash another of his high diamonds, but led the diamond deuce in order to put East in. (West knew that it was East and not South who held the diamond eight, for had South's Jack been guarded, he could have taken the heart finesse without fear.)

The underlead of this high diamond was the only play to save that game. East took the trick with his diamond eight and promptly cashed the Queen and Jack of clubs. On these West let go his two remaining established diamonds, saving the guarded King of hearts. East next led a heart through South's Ace-Queen and South could not avoid giving West the heart King which was the fifth and setting trick for his side.

Postmaster Albert Goldman, at the New York Postoffice, thought somebody was joking when he first saw a letter addressed "Eighty Four, Pennsylvania" . . . But investigation proved that there are quite a number of towns which have numbers for names . . . There is, for instance, "Fifteen, Ky." "Five, Ark." "Hundred, W. Va." "Eighty Eight, Ky." There is a Roulette, Pa., a Dice, Ky., and a Postoffice at Dime Box, Tex. . . . There are 11 villages tagged Roosevelt, 5 named Coolidge, 4 named Farley . . . The most devilish, however, is Hell, Norway.

I'm sorry that Bruce Cabot and Adrienne Ames have called it a day . . . Scoops on divorces have never given me any satisfaction . . . You get only a ghoulish reaction from having such a prediction come true . . . To brag about it would be similar to standing on the housetops and screaming: "Look, look — I said they'd be unhappy and miserable. Look, look, I'm right" . . . Bruce and Adrienne were a swell couple. Last time I saw them was at the Central Park Casino during the winter, and they seemed very happy, the handsome husband and the attractive young wife . . . You never realize how close the tears are to the Broadway surface, at all times . . . There is too much unhappiness in the world . . . Too much jealousy, too great ambitions, too much greed, too many heartaches . . . There should be more dignity to living, a bigger proportion of gentleness, more enduring affections . . . Instead, we have Reno, the national confessional, where people kneel, for all the world to see, to demand freedom from what seemed so precious only a short while before.

Occasionally there is grim humor to such cases . . . Smartest of supper clubs in London are Quaglimo's and Savrino's, where the lords and the dukes and the princes of the royal blood order vintage wines . . . Quaglimo was the head waiter at Savrino's originally . . . But the boss married Quaglimo's wife, and London society found this a choice morsel of gossip . . . The head waiter retired to the mint of reprisal to coin a revenge that would be viciously sweet . . . His years of training dominated his mind . . . A floorwalker, seeking revenge on his store, would undoubtedly think first of blocking the aisles to the counters . . . A head waiter, seeking revenge, quite naturally would think first of opening a rival restaurant . . . The boss, Savrino, had stolen his wife; he would steal Savrino's customers . . . That is how it has worked out . . . Each night the electric sign spells out "Quaglimo's" against the London sky, an electric tribute to a romance that was short-circuited.

Jack Donnelly, evidently a telegraphy company employe from the capital letters on his typewritten letter, registers a pleasant protest: "Dear Ed: Your article on Battery Park was interesting, but why don't you tell people instead to go to Central Park, where they can get a band concert nearly every second night and a dance orchestra on Tuesday and Thursdays. Everything is nice and clean, the stars wink down, and conversation comes easily with the nice looking girl on your arm. Hot dogs are a dime a shot, a glass of beer is the same, and you can sit on nice chairs while the view of the lake, shimmering under the lights, reminds you of Venice or Paris, as we see 'em in the newsreels. In back of the concert bowl is the Casino, where your Broadway pals spend a lot of money to be entertained, but I'll bet they don't have as good a time as the people sitting listening to Edwin Franko Goldman playing 'On the Hall' or 'Bolero.' Come on up some night and hear 5,000 people whistling 'On the Mall' in accompaniment to Goldman's band." My answer is a whistling affirmative, Jack.

The mail man has just staggered in with a new load of letters. This has been going on for some time now, ever since I asked in this column why it was that the majority of soda jerkers in Broadway stores were Southern boys. Boiling down the accumulation of information, these reasons advance prominently: (1) The Coca-Cola Co., at Atlanta, conducts a regular training school for soda jerkers, so the South gets off to a head start with expert instruction; (2) temperamentally, the Southern boy is best fitted for the task, as his Southern background makes him courteous to women patrons, the bulk of the soda trade; (3) soda jerking rose to its greatest proficiency in the South because of the prohibition of liquor. The drug stores and soda fountains, to capitalize on the situation, emphasized the preparation of soft drinks that could relieve the drought; (4) Southerners do not object to the long hours and the $15 or $16 per week, as most of them split up into groups of three or four, live together and reduce their expenses to a minimum by collective bargaining. The next time you order a chocolate soda on Broadway, by golly, you'll appreciate its background.

"Love Me Forever," Grace Moore's New Film, Offers Test of Screen Grand Opera

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

It will soon be demonstrated whether American motion picture audiences want grand opera on their screens or not.

I mean to say that "Love Me Forever," the second celluloid outlet for the ebullient talents of Miss Grace Moore will just about cast the die, one way of the other.

This is not to commit oneself to the unchangeable notion that the picture disclosed to the drama desks by the Warner Brothers executives, who will play it at the Earle, in a private preview yesterday afternoon is either a masterpiece or a dud. It partakes a little of the salient features of both.

Such broad statements as this, of course, partake no little of the sorry business of straddling the issue. We have no present intention of doing that. To us—and this is strictly an editorial "we" and "us," you understand, meaning exclusively "me"—there is no need of straddling. "Love Me Forever" is unequivocally a grand piece of entertainment.

Time Will Tell."

Whether it will measure up to "One Night of Love," the film in which Grace Moore scored her first great success before the cameras and microphones, remains to be seen after the film has had a chance to justify itself away from the multiplied glamour of the Radio City Music Hall, in New York, and other cultural centers where a true line on its appeal to the masses may not be obtained. My personal notion would be that it will fall something short of its distinguished predecessor.

My opinion is not so much based on any sentimental concern as it is upon the fact that in "Love Me Forever" an attempt has been made to harmonize elements of drama and mass appeal that may not rationally be merged into a closely knit and convincing dramaturgic entity.

There seems to this column no rational excuse for combining the outlawry of the gangsters with the artistic commitments of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company and its directorate. Neither does there appear to be any logical reason for making a diva of the highest form of artistic expression the inalienable love of a man who came up from the stockyards through the gambling houses and "spaghetti joints" to a sure place in the realm of song.

Attempts Difficult Task.

There is an attempt here to weld elements of drama that are not compatible. And to that extent "Love Me Forever" is the inferior, in point of reflecting an actual facet of the colorful business of living in a world of reality rather than imagery, to its precursor in the Moore line.

But getting back to the matter of opera, Miss Moore in this subject has an opportunity to scale the heights in almost a full act of Puccini's "La Boheme," in which a golden voiced tenor—but not to the extent of a Caruso—plays an important part in realizing the full lyric beauty of arias that long since have held first place in popular esteem, Michael Bartlett, this would be.

If "movie" audiences, so-called, will attend closely upon the chromatic splendors of "La Boheme" to the extent it is revealed here, then there is no longer any reason to suspect that grand opera is not ripe for cinema plucking.

This, as you can plainly see, is no comprehensive or detailed review of "Love Me Forever." It is merely the recording of a fleeting first impression of its comparative worth with its brilliant forerunner in the same school of pictorial expression.

Voices at Best.

For those who love voices of the first rank in operatic intervals commensurate with their interpretative powers, "Love Me Forever" will prove an ace hit. It will even disclose Miss Moore in the role of a jazz singer of "hot" numbers that will hark back in the minds of the oldsters, more or less, to the days when the star was a luminary of popular musical revue on Broadway.

It also will establish Leo Carillo, if he needs any establishment, as an actor of the first rank. To many of us he has been that through all the years that he has been clowning around before the lenses. In this picture he is an actor—and the best one in it.

Full details in Saturday morning's Post. No extra charge! (Advt.)

Personal nomination for the funniest screen scene of the week: The brief business in the maternity hospital in which Warren William, Vince Barnett and William Gargan pace up and down the corridor expecting the worst, while Hobart Cavanaugh, the expectant father, sits in stoical indifference awaiting the final word. Mr. William wins again when the nurse announces quintuplets, he having insured against twins. His tag-line is: Congratulations, Mr. Klemp, you have brought the championship back to America! (At the Earle, this is.)

Subtle, sort of, and over the heads of the audience, barring us confirmed bachelors, who have been through it so often.

Oh-o, that can't be right!

Clocking the Winis.

Some of us have sat on the sidelines and applauded while Wini Shaw and Phil Regan have sung their merry roundelays from the stage of Warner Brothers Earle Theater, where they are currently making a week of personal appearances—as well as from the screen in such things as "In Caliente" and other tuneful hits—without really knowing anything about these gracious young artists on their own accounts.

That was all remedied yesterday afternoon by my esteemed afternoon contemporary, Mr. Edward de Selding Melcher, of the Star, when he assembled a group of kindred spirits in his apartment at Wardman Park to meet intimately these talented young people who face so promising a future before the cameras and microphones.

Miss Shaw is a personable young brunette—and what a trite description that is!—who is given credit for having been born in Hawaii, when, as a matter of fact, she is a native of San Francisco who was taken to Hawaii by her parents when still very young.

Wini by a Head.

She is a charming and talented girl—as you might judge from her "The Lady In Red" number from "Calienthe"—who strikes me as the only close approach I ever have met to the peculiar claim to distinction possessed by Fannie Hurst. That is a claim to extraordinary physical endowment. I have set down here before that Miss Hurst's head is one of the masterpieces of a master sculptor in impressive proportions and significant dimensions. Miss Shaw's is a close second.

Both of these gifted artistes will be found upon close observance to possess men's heads poised upon feminine bodies—wide temples, high foreheads, cerebral depth and a strength of line and contour that any man migh envy.

In the cryptic arts of the phrenologist this may mean nothing. To us laymen, it means, at least, that here are two talented women set slightly apart from their fellows by an unusual physical inheritance. Miss Shaw has almost as much personality as Fannie Hurst. Whether it springs from the conformation of the head or not, somebody else, more sapient than I, will have to say.

If you care to catch her at her playful best, you should see Miss Shaw perched on a piano doing her inimitable impersonation of Helen Morgan singing "My Bill," as she did yesterday afternoon, by way of ribbing Mr. Melcher a bit for having criticized her once in print for having done that identical thing in public. Miss Shaw could be a second Helen Morgan, if she wished, but happily she is content to be simply the first Wini Shaw—which is plenty good!

Option Taken Up.

Phil Regan is even more generous than Miss Shaw in his willingness to "give" for the entertainment of non-paying admirers. He sang his whole Earle act at Mr. Melcher's rout yesterday evening and came up as fresh as the temperature and humidity would permit. Which was pretty fresh, at that.

The Warner Brothers have just manifested more than their usual acumen by taking up Phil's option and insuring him 52 weeks' salary on their pay roll for the next year. He deserves it. Coupled with an exceptionally fine voice, he betrays a natural and congenial flair for "acting" in the spirit of modern youth. This is an asset that the Warners have been quick to appreciate. The lad should go far.

As a matter of fact, he has done that already. What I mean to say is that he should go much farther. If he does he will be pretty much by himself. That's how good he is.

Back to Burbank.

These two charming young people are playing their second week of three on the stage this week at the Earle. They opened last week in Buffalo, play this week on Thirteenth street, finish the three in Philadelphia next week and then return at once to the West Coast to take up their further duties on the Warner lot in Burbank.

They are a couple of great kids. More power to them. And thanks to Eddie for having thrown the party—a sentiment which no doubt will be shared in by the Arthur de Tittas, Carter Barron, William C. Ewing, Dan Terrell, Burrus Williams, the junior of the Corcoran Thoms; Hardie Meakin, George Riley and the numerous others who were present.

If you haven't heard Mr. Regan and Miss Shaw at the Earle, you will wish to.

I have heard them and I still wish to—which may explain why you probably will find me backstage at the Earle this afternoon, with both ears cocked. And maybe tonight, too.

That's the way I am with things I like.

On the debit side of "Love Me Forever's" ledger may be cited the insignificant facts that Grace Moore had better begin to count her calories against the acquisition of a double—or triple—chin, and might well pay some attention to what the golf boys would call her "stance." She is just a trifle bow-legged, if you will pardon the suggestion, and her toes point a bit when she walks—all of which, of course, has no bearing whatever upon the limpid beauty of her voice, which is synchronized remarkably well, considering the fact that Miss Moore records after a full day's rest after her acting of the singing scenes for the cameras. Once in a while, her lip readings do not jibe with the lyrics, but that is seldom and hardly noticeable even when it occurs.

Reissued-by-Request Note.

Mr Compositor: Please revive that old line about "It's not the heat, it's the stupidity."

Meaning this business of carrying a raincoat every time it doesn't and leaving it hanging on the peg every time it does.

Boy, was I soaked last night—meaning outside, of course!

A Blonde Pampers Her Sulky Pet

There sems to be no reason why the pooch appearing on the left should be so in the dumps about posing with so charming a blonde picture star. She would be, in case you have not already established the identity, Shirley Grey, to be seen next in Columbia's "One Is Guilty." If that is the case, it would seem, in this instance, to be the dog. There is no reason why anybody else should frown at the prospect of being "snapped" with so lovely a subject. But Boston terriers are like that, they say—snooty because of all that culture. They should be beaned!

Staunton Boys Get Excellent Army Training

Post Scholarship Winner May Study for Any Career He Desires.

Military instruction will prepare a boy to defend his country in time of need, but, more than that, it teaches him at all times to subordinate his personal desires for the common good. That is the motive of such instruction as it is given at Staunton Military Academy, where The Washington Post is offering a two-year scholarship, beginning next fall.

"The military training at Staunton," according to authorities at the famed Virginia academy, "is given because of its educational value to the boy. It is designed to develop the virtues of co-operation, respect for constituted authority, orderliness and personal neatness, recognition of the importance of promptness and the poise that comes with self-confidence. The regularity in daily life thus achieved proves of inestimable value not only in the development of healthful bodies, but in keeping the mind clear and alert as well."

Maintains R. O. T. C. Unit.

The academy maintains a unit in the R. O. T. C. with a detail from the Army of two commissioned and two noncommissioned officers. It is on the accredited list at both West Point and Annapolis, and recommended graduates are eligible to enter either of these institutions by taking only the few substantiating and physical examinations necessary, provided they have obtained their nominations for cadetships.

While the boy who plans to go to either the military or the naval academy after graduation will find the training at Staunton particularly valuable, any boy, regardless of his future vocation, can take courses to fit him for his chosen walk in life. Whether he intends to go to college or to enter business immediately after finishing school he will find courses to suit his individual need.

Contest Closes August 1.

That is why every boy who is eligible for The Post scholarship will want to enter the contest before it closes August 1. By that time each contestant must write a letter of not more than 500 words on "Why I Would Like to Go to Staunton." His scholarship record and character also will be taken into consideration in making the decision.

For second place winner there will be a week's vacation at Camp Calvert, on Breton Bay, St. Marys County, Md. There he will enjoy land and water sports, the outdoor life that appeals to every boy, and the companionship of other boys his own age.

Washington boys who are sons of World War veterans, and who are prepared to enter the junior year at Staunton in the fall, should write for details at once, addressing Alice Fox Pitts, Stauton Contest Director, in care of The Washington Post.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., July 9.—By a vote of almost three to one, Warren County yesterday approved a $50,000 bond issue for the erection of a new courthouse to replace the century-old building now in use. The vote was 1,020 to 375.

Agriculture Fair Will Be Revived

Hagerstown to Concentrate on Farmers' Exhibits.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 9.—The seventy-second annual Hagerstown Agricultural Fair, which will be held September 24-27, inclusive, will be just what the name implies, President Andrew K. Coffman announced.

Now that the fair association is concentrating all of its racing in the spring meet, association officials are planning this year to make the fall exhibition truly an agricultural one, and will enlarge not only this department, but the horticultural department as well. It has been the tendency since pari-mutuel racing was introduced at the fall exhibition to neglect the agricultural and horticultural end, but last year the fair association began to swing back to the old-fashioned farmers' fair and returned a profit for the association.

Harness racing, which was brought back last fall with marked success, will be one of the features at this year's fair.

Hollywood

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, July 9.

MARGARET SULLAVAN leaves her portable dressing room and walks onto the set ready to play a big sequence for "So Red the Rose." Director King Vidor, perched on a high stool, says to all on the set: "Quiet, please, we are going to shoot." There are a number of visitors on the set this day; all with okays from executives. Visitors do not annoy Director Vidor. He is more concerned with his script and his performers.

The assistant director, however, takes up the shout. An assistant director either acts very important, assuming power which isn't his and is a big nuisance, or he is a good-natured guy who does his job, trying to keep the cast in good humor while they work.

• • • •

Miss Sullavan is the first to let out a loud hee-haw. She forgets completely her somber lines and role. Director Vidor contrives what may best be described as a loud smile. He says to the assistant director: "Where did you get that?" The assistant answers: "I used to work with DeMille. Always used that line with him."

Margaret Sullavan plays the scene over and over. The visitors, seeing their first movie being made, are disappointed. They believed it would be more thrilling. "We should have a prop scene for all visitors," says Director Vidor." "We should do it when they're on the set so they can see something exciting." It's a good idea. I'd welcome it also.

• • • •

DOLORES DEL RIO stands in the center of the set of "Romance in a Glass House" trying to learn her lines. The script girl reads the lines from the scenario to the Mexican beauty, who repeats them, line by line. Director Busby Berkeley has been called away for a few minutes to answer a phone call. It is an important phone call. It is from his lawyer, who is to tell him how much money the judge has decided he must pay his wife, Merna Kennedy. Busby seems gay when he returns. It is evident that the judge has been kind to him.

Director Berkeley, knowing the order of the Court, now gives his own orders. It is pleasant to watch Miss Del Rio act. She is wearing a revealing gown. She fumbles her lines, but then manages to recite them in continuity. Director Berkeley says: "Print that one."

While they are arranging a new setup, I sit down and chat with Miss Del Rio. I tell her that she ought to play all her scenes in a bathing suit. She replies: "I don't wear a bathing suit in this picture, but I wear a gorgeous thin chiffon gown. It is just as good." We shall see.

• • • •

Bing Crosby is in jail, and Joan Bennett has come to interview him in this particular scene in "Two for Tonight." Frank Tuttle is directing, and George Raft, taking a busman's holiday, is on the set. Raft is very friendly with Tuttle, for it was Tuttle who directed "The Glass Key." And the critics said Raft gave one of his finest performances. Of course, Raft wants Tuttle to direct his next flicker. Crosby and Bennett play the small scene. Tuttle says: "Very good." "Yeah!" shouts Raft. "It's okay for me, too, Groaner." This is the studio's nickname for Crooner Crosby.

• • • •

HERB WILLIAMS and Willie Howard are making their debut in a feature flicker in the screen version of David Belasco's "Rose of the Rancho." When the late theatrical wizard presented this hit, these two comedy roles were not in the play. They have been written in by the screen writers, who claimed that they employed "The Shakespearean theory" in doing so. And they used to call Mr. Belasco a wizard.

The scene is in a California saloon during the gold rush days when, according to flickers, every one was picturesque. Williams, Howard and an actor named Harry Woods are standing against the bar drinking beer. Williams is wearing a frock coat and a plug hat, and Howard is dressed in a cowboy suit and a large Mexican sombrero. If the dialogue is as funny as the characters look, it will be an amusing scene.

Genuine beer is being served, and Director Marion Gering orders Williams, Howard and Woods to tilt their glasses and drink. But Williams and Howard don't drink their beer, only Woods. The scene calls for them to get him drunk.

• • • •

Again and again, just like all scenes in flickers, they play this bit over and over. I stand watching. Woods has swallowed 15 schooners of beer before Director Gering has a take which pleases him. I don't believe Woods could have played the scene much longer. How many schooners of beer can you swallow and stand up?

Later, I learn that Harry Woods had been on the wagon until this part came along. It was a nice role with good money, and so he got permission from the Mrs. to fall off the wagon.

Federal Housing Office Is Opened

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 9.—Permanent headquarters for the Western Maryland district of the Federal Housing Administration were opened yesterday in the postoffice building by William B. French, field representative, under Henry W. Webb, Baltimore, who is the State director. George Hanekamp will be in charge.

During the brief time that the housing administration has been operating here, loans close to $200,000 have been approved in the Cumberland area alone. The district comprises Allegany, Garrett, Washington, Frederick and Carroll Counties.

The distinction between the Home Owners Loan Corporation, of which Oliver H. Bruce is manager for western Maryland, and the Federal Housing Administration, is that the former loans money to householders in distress, while the latter does not advance money but guarantees loans by the banks for refinancing, new construction and repair work. Local banks are cooperating in the Government effort to aid building, French said today.

National League Planning Move to Abandon All-Star Game

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

THEY ought to give the all-star game back to the fans, or something. The major league bosses, particularly the American League people, seem to have forgotten one of the true purposes of the game aside from the charity angle, which is very worthy, indeed. Despite their success against the National Leaguers in the three games played, the American League managers have botched matters for the public.

POVICH.

As this department understands it, the game was to be played between representative teams of the two major leagues for the purposes of (1) setting up a fund for indigent ball players, (2) affording a comparison of the two big leagues, and (3) permitting the fans the spectacle of a star at every position, and the opportunity to see their favorite players in action against the best.

That last item—the big thump for the fans—was completely lost sight of and ignored by the American League managers in all of the three all-star games played. Particularly did Mickey Cochrane subordinate the fan interest, which made the game possible, to his desire to win the ball game. In ordinary pursuits, the manager who is not consumed by a desire to win, is no manager at all, but in an all-star game it is tantamount to breaking the faith with the fans.

Thus it was that those 69,812 at Cleveland who paid the freight for the big leagues were denied the spectacle that had been promised them. Aside from that ninth inning, when Cochrane inserted three players who failed to receive either a chance in the field or at bat, he exposed to the view of the eager fans only 10 of the 20 stars they thought they were paying to see.

IS victory so important that the American League can afford to give the fans a bum show? That's exactly what it did. Those 69,812 never saw hide nor hair of such favorites as Tommy Bridges, Schoolboy Rowe, Sammy West, Buddy Myer and Rick Ferrell, and the last-minute insertion of Ossie Bluege, Ben Chapman and Roger Cramer in the ninth inning served only to emphasize the fact that Cochrane had been hiding his talent.

Maybe I am too harsh on Cochrane. He was given the office to win the ball game for the added prestige of the American League and win it he did. But I call it a very crummy trick, with Cochrane, perhaps, but the American League officialdom mostly, to blame for the grand run-around that the fans who had anticipated seeing their stars in action received.

Somebody, at some time, should have told Cochrane that this was an all-star show, not another ball game. That was the job of the league president, but I dare say victory, not the fans, was uppermost in his thoughts. They cherish these all-star victories do these major league presidents, but I didn't think it was to the extent of the public be damned.

Two straight World Series defeats by the National League doubtlessly have not been setting well with the American League bosses who realize that in five of the league cities they must compete directly with National League teams. Thus an all-star victory recoups in a measure their lost World Series prestige, but hardly at the price they have to pay in the good will of the fans.

THE National League has treated the game in all three years with an eye cocked to the interest of the fans. In each game the National Leaguers have put their stars on parade in wholesale numbers, win or lose and come what may. It is keeping the faith with the fans. Monday's game at Cleveland when Manager Frankie Frisch sent 17 players into the ball game compared to the 10 that Cochrane used in the first eight innings, was but another consistent example.

Maybe they ought to give the game back to the fans, who almost had it last year when they were permitted to name the participants only to have the two big leagues take over the nominations at the last minute. This game is supposed to be baseball's treat to the fans, but for three years it has developed into a mad desire of the big league bosses to add to their league's prestige.

After all, the fans would do pretty well with the teams. For example, I doubt if you'd have seen Lou Gehrig on first base if the fans had been permitted to pick the American League first baseman. They'd have chosen the fellow who really earned the job—Detroit's Hank Greenberg, who has driven in almost twice as many runs as Gehrig and who is leading the league in homers, outside of being a pretty fair first baseman.

If an all-star berth is the player's reward for brilliant play during the season, what in the world was Al Simmons doing on the team? He had been benched by the White Sox for weak hitting, yet Cochrane chose him in preference to Roger Cramer and Sammy West, who, by all odds and percentages, were better ball players this year. At least the fans would have picked the guys they wanted to see play ball against the other league's best, not a lot of fellows who were great ball players when they had it—when they had it. And that goes for Joe Cronin, too.

Lackadaisical All-Star Team Scored by Spectator Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 9.—There was an item in the papers following the recent rather dull All-Star ball game in Cleveland that the magnates will in all probability give the game back to the fans next year and let them select the two teams by popular vote. This would be a novelty inasmuch as the fans have never really had the game. True, they selected the members of the two squads by popular vote, and also indicated the order in which they should be used, but the managers shuffled that order and wound up using the players they pleased.

I would therefore raise a small question as to whether in the first place the fans want the game back, and in the second whether the newspapers can be suckered into giving all the free space they used to devote to this extravaganza, only to find that it didn't mean a thing beyond advertising major league baseball free-for-nothing.

The All-Star game to my mind is still one of the greatest spectacles in baseball, even greater than the World Series for that matter, but at the rate it is going it can not be expected to last very long as an attraction. The crowd of 70,000-odd that gathered in the enormous Cleveland municipal stadium last Monday afternoon would hardly point to a shrinkage in interest. But the things that happened there were not particularly stimulating.

Something Missing.

Jimmy Foxx hit a red hot home run. The American Leaguers turned in some fine pitching with Gomez and Harder. Dizzy Dean appeared. A lot of the stars appeared likewise. But somehow the thing never got itself into the complexion of a tight ball game in which one great team is striving to defeat another great team. It seems hardly possible that with an All-Star batting order, the National League should be able to manufacture only one run. Even a fifth-rate team with a little exhortation and steam-up can put on some kind of a last-inning batting rally, even if it fails. But the National Leaguers were merely taking a sort of a duty cut at the ball, with more vehemence than accuracy. Their hearts were hardly in the busines of winning it for the dear old Senior Service. It seemed to be just a sort of a circus. I was looking for a ball game.

Of course it isn't every ball game throughout the season that turns into slambang drama tightening up to a smashing ninth or tenth inning climax. There is many a game played throughout the season where one team scores five runs in the first inning and thereafter both teams settle down to play out the rest of the innings so that they may have their cold tub. But when you get together nearly $1,000,000 worth of ball players you come into the ball yard exchange to get the answer to what happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable body. But the last three National League innings when they ought to have been rallying to tie

Cincy Officials Deny All-Star Game Rumor

Cincinnati, July 9 (AP).—Officials of the Cincinnati Reds today formally denied reports (not carried by the Associated Press) that they ordered Manager Chuck Dressen to pitch Paul Derringer on Sunday rather than save him for Monday's all-star game.

The statement asserted no official has ever attempted to govern Dressen's pitching choices.

Giants, Reds Cards Are Opposed

2 Owners Wired Pilots Not to Save Hurlers for Cleveland Game.

Financial Angle Is Not Satisfactory; Frisch-Terry Fight Denied.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Attempts to abandon the all-star game with the American League will be made by National League club owners at the December meeting.

The Giants, Cardinals and Reds are the leaders of a campaign to scrap the game.

Two National League owners telegraphed their managers to disregard the all-star game in making their pitching selections in Sunday's games, it was learned today.

Powell Crosley, jr., Cincinnati owner, wired Charlie Dressen, Reds manager: "Your pitching selections should be made in an attempt to beat St. Louis and keep our club in sixth place and not in an attempt to accommodate the all-star game."

Managers Used Stars.

Dressen used his ace, Paul Derringer, in one of Sunday's games against the Cards. Frankie Frisch, St. Louis manager, used Dizzy Dean in part of the double header. Bill Terry, New York manager, used Carl Hubbell the day before the all-star game. In keeping Hal Schumacher out of action, Terry was saving him to open against Pittsburg Wednesday and not for the all-star game.

"You may pitch in the all-star game if you like," Terry is said to have told Schumacher, "but remember, I expect you to go nine innings against Pittsburgh Wednesday."

Several magnates are said to be dissatisfied with the financial arrangement which does not cut them in for any of the gate receipts. Profits all go to the Association of Professional Ball Players of America, which provides for tubercular, rheumatic, paralytic and impoverished ball players, who have retired from active play. The Cleveland game drew $92,692, a record sum.

American Is Satisfied.

The American League, which has won all three games, and which was the first league to agree to the game at the request of a Chicago newspaper, is well satisfied with the arrangements and is willing to continue to play the annual contest.

Reports of a fist fight between Bill Terry, Giants' manager, and Frankie Frisch have been denied on all sides. They dressed together in Cleveland and Frisch consulted Terry, manager of the 1934 National League team, on several moves before the game.

Weary of Own League, Braves Lose to Tigers

Detroit, July 9 (AP).—Jo-Jo White and Marvin Owen in the eleventh inning gave the Detroit Tigers an 8-to-7 victory over the Boston Braves in an inter-league exhibition baseball game at Navin Field this afternoon.

Gen. Alvin Crowder started on the mound for Detroit and was relieved by Clyde Hatter in the fifth. Moore and Berger hit home runs for the Braves, both off Crowder.

Whitehill Seeks Tigers' Claws In Opener

By Shirley Povich.

THE ten-game winning streak of the Detroit Tigers will meet up this afternoon with the pitcher who, above all others, nurses the keenest desire to win a ball game from Detroit.

Earl Whitehill yesterday received with obvious satisfaction Manager Bucky Harris' nomination to pitch today for the Nats in the opening of the three-game series with the Tigers. The temperamental Washington southpaw, who has very little affection for any opposition, has none whatsoever for the team for which he labored vainly for ten years.

Despite his failure to win a game in a month, Whitehill is now Washington's best pitcher. His losing 2-1 effort against the Athletics last week was the best-pitched ball game received by the Nats on their 26-day road trip and it was Whitehill who lost a 1-run decision to the Tigers in a 14-inning game two weeks ago.

It was Tommy Bridges who beat Whitehill in that marathon encounter and it will be Bridges who will face Whitehill today. The slender right-hander only lately saw his own nine-game winning streak shattered by the Yankees.

Tigers Favored.

Only one game behind the league-leading Yankees as a result of their sensational ten-game spurt, the Tigers are now the favorites to repeat in the pennant race. But Mickey Cochrane's lads hope to extend their current winning streak at least to 14 games, their record figure of last year when they finally overhauled the Yanks.

A prime mover in the recovery of the Tigers has been Marvin Owen, who was benched for weak hitting a month ago, but who has returned to the game with a vengeance. With Owen back at third base, the Tigers now boast the identical personnel which triumphed so conclusively last season.

Aid to All-Star Game Is Seen in 3 Changes

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Three suggestions calculated to put the all-star major league ball game on a scrappier, more widely popular basis were put forward by observers today in the wake of the third annual big show in the wide open spaces of the Cleveland stadium.

It is proposed: (1) To give fans throughout the country a chance to vote on the selection of the two teams, as orignally done and subsequently discarded; (2) allow for an off-day before the game, so that the rival pitchers will be in that much better shape to perform, regardless of their regular season assignments, and (3) set aside a percentage of the gate receipts, say $10,000, to be split among the players on the victorious side.

The all-star game is strictly a charity affair now. The players and club owners do not get a nickel out of the receipts, except for bare expenses. All profits go to benevolent funds for old ball players, handled at three separate sources. As such, it's a noble enterprise and one that has now contributed close to $150,000 in three years for benefit purposes.

Players Lack Enthusiasm.

It is likely to be continued on the present basis, but as a professional proposition many baseball men think it would stimulate the game to offer something besid s prestige to the victors. The players themselves do not regard the contest with as much enthusiasm as the fans. They like to play and win, but their motives are not exactly altruistic and their minds are chiefly concerned with regular jobs. They feel they are running risks without getting anything out of it.

Take the case of Hal Schumacher, ace right-hander of the league-leading New York Giants. Hal was saved for the all-star game by Manager Bill Terry. He's the best pitcher in the National League, on the basis of current records as well as expert conviction. He was slated to start at Cleveland but he didn't and there are still arguments about that in National League quarters, because the game was lost before he took the mound for a four-inning trick.

But here's the point: Schumacher was told beforehand by his manager that he was booked to pitch the opening game of a series with Pittsburgh tomorrow, regardless of how long he worked in the all-star show, so Hal asked to be relieved after doing his stint.

Obviously National Leaguers don't relish three beatings in a row but they can't squawk. They selected their own five-man pitching staff for this year's game, without the help of the fans or any outsiders. Three of the five, Carl Hubbell, Dizzy Dean and Paul Derringer, were used Sunday, the day before the all-star game. Another, Van Mungo, was forced out by an injury and replaced by the luck-

$200,000 Expected At Joe Louis Battle

N. Y. Fight Body Approves Fight With Levinsky.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 9.—The Illinois State Athletic Commission today placed its approval on the date, site and price of tickets for the Joe Louis-King Levinsky heavyweight fight scheduled for the night of August 7 at Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox.

Promoter Joe Foley posted a $20,000 bond with the commission, binding the match. Inasmuch as the commission demands a bond of 10 per cent of the anticipated gate receipts, it is evident that the ring board will expect the fight to draw at least $200,000. The ticket prices ranged from $10 downward.

The commission also granted Promoter Foley an option on the August 8, 9 and 10 dates in the event unfavorable weather forces a postponement.

Seeded Entries Triumph at N. J. Nets

Barney Welsh Advances as Other Washington Players Lose.

By the Associated Press.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., July 9.—Despite a drizzling rain that held up play for two hours, 33 matches were finished today in the third annual invitation tennis singles of the Bathing and Tennis Club with Frankie Parker, defending champion, leading the way into the third round.

Every one of the eight seeded entrants were winners, most of them in hollow fashion. Parker was most unimpressive in eliminating Armand L. Bruneau, Brooklyn veteran, 6—1, 6—3, his forehand shots being weak and listless.

Most likely contenders are Wilbur E. Hess, the new national intercollegiate champion from Fort Worth, Tex.; William Reese, Atlanta, and Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., who defeated Parker last week in the Kentucky State championship.

Peacock and Owens Split Honors

Rival Is Victor in Jump; U. S. 2-Mile Record Set by Bright.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 9.—Jesse Owens, of Ohio State, and his national championship conqueror, Eulace Peacock, of Temple, broke even in two events tonight in their final duel of the 1935 track and field season, but were obliged to share the honors of a rain-drenched all-star meet, conducted on New York University's Ohio field, with two brilliant record performances.

Peacock capitalized his speedier getaway and withstood Owens' sensational finishing drive to win the 100-yard dash by a scant foot in 9.7 seconds. The "Buckeye bullet" came back on a slippery take-off to square accounts in the broad jump with a leap of 23 feet 9 inches. Peacock's best was 23 feet 6¾ inches.

An unheralded foot-racer from the Far West, Norman Bright, of Bellingham, Wash., carrying the colors of the San Francisco Olympic Club, electrified the crowd of several hundred weather-defying enthusiasts by romping to victory over Joe McCluskey, of the New York A. C., in American record time for the 2-mile run.

Bright left McCluskey flat-footed on the last lap to win by 30 yards in 9 minutes 13.2 seconds. This clipped more than two seconds from the former United States outdoor mark of 9:15.4, hung up by Joe Mangan, of Cornell, on the Princeton track in July, 1933.

Bright gave the timers a surprise at the outset by requesting he be given the times at each quarter, then made good his record-breaking threat with a spectacular last-lap

Peacock Olympic Bound—Paddock

Owens, Metcalfe Given Small Chance for Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Long Beach, Calif., July 9.—Charles W. Paddock, who once held most of the sprint records, scanned the 1936 Olympic games horizon and saw only Eulace Peacock, of Temple, as a sure bet to defend the dash honors at Berlin for the United States.

Only dimly could the once "fastest human," veteran of three Olympiads, see such speedsters as Jesse Owens, Ralph Metcalfe and George Anderson, as he paused in his duty as business manager of the Press Telegram Publishing Co.

"I can only see Peacock as a certain performer in the games at Berlin," said Paddock. "I'm afraid Metcalfe can't hold up another year, what with that bad leg, and I can't help feeling Owens is pretty much burned out."

400 Windows Ready for Wagering

Dump Transformed Into Beautiful Track in 10-Week Period.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 9.—Less than ten weeks after breaking ground on a reclaimed east Boston dump, contractors turned over the completed Suffolk Downs, one of the largest and finest race tracks in the world, to the Eastern Racing Association tonight on the eve of its 28-day inaugural meeting.

As a large army of artisans worked around the clock in a furious battle against time, the racing association, dominated by Charles F. Adams, grocery chain head, hockey magnate and majority stockholder in the Boston Braves, kept the wheels moving with the power derived from a golden geyser that spurted more than $2,000,000.

This breath-taking financing, in which about 500 Boston horse lovers participated in large and small degrees, was only a minor problem to the racing association, which was greatly hampered during the early construction stages by at least 20 lawsuits. Although each litigant asked for an injunction, all cases were settled without delaying a single workman on the gigantic project, which gave Boston its first running horse track in at least a quarter-century.

Near City's Center.

Located less than 5 miles from the State House, within a 10-cent fare radius of Greater Boston's millions, Suffolk Downs seems assured of even more financial success than that enjoyed by its tremendously profitable neighbors, Rockingham Park in Salem, N. H., and Narragansett Park in Pawtucket, R. I. Since New Hampshire broke the ice in 1933, by legalizing pari-mutuel betting, those two tracks have handled almost $70,000,000 in wagers.

As the 1,500-odd thoroughbreds head for the third stop on the New England racing wheel, New England bettors have wagered a total of $14,367,806, a daily average of $327,529 for the first 45 days of the 1935 season.

The immense grandstand, which seats 16,000, faces a huge and pitched concrete lawn that can accommodate 50,000 standees. The elaborate clubhouse has accommodations for 7,500 more. Its builder claims that a crowd of 100,000 can be packed within its gates, if such a need ever arises.

400 Betting Windows.

Judge Frank J. Bryan, veteran racing secretary, heads the official list and Mortimer Mahoney has been given charge of the 400-window pari-mutuel plant. Adams serves as treasurer of the racing association, and Bayard Tuckerman, one of the most active proponents for the newly enacted Massachusetts racing law, is listed as its president.

The feature of tomorrow's opening card of eight races will be the $5,000-added Commonwealth, a 6-furlong dash for 3-year-olds, which has attracted 29 nominations from 22 stables. E. R. Bradley's great Boxthorn will probably go to the post as the favorite over such outstanding sprinters as Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Bachelor Dinner, Good Harvest and Erin Lad, C. F. Whitney's Motto, the Belair Stud's Vicaress and Sir Beverly. Today's series of showers promised a heavy track, which will force enough scratches to reduce the field to fit the 12-stall starting gate.

At the Post . . .

Suffolk Downs Race Track, July 9.

Dear Al:

I arrived here this morning and wish to report that Clocker Mike actually has gained weight. He was as fat and round as a butter ball when he met me at the Boston station. I haven't had a chance to go into details with him as yet, but there seems some mystery. I know he couldn't have been overeating on the winners he was picking while I was at Charles Town. Speaking of Charles Town, this track reminds me of the West Virginia course in a way. From what Mike tells me, the graders and steamrollers are going out of one gate as the horses come in another—just as they did when the West Virginia track opened. But there the comparison stops. I was kinda worried while en route here regarding whether or not Suffolk Downs would have an English accent on its racing. It will, and it's only natural, here where broad A's sell for a dime a dozen. From what I can gather, one of the first things drawn in on the plans for this track was an English walking ring and an outdoor paddock a la Epsom Downs. The horses will be saddled under the shade of the trees and then will be paraded about the ring before going on the track. Hialeah, Santa Anita and Arlington Park are the only tracks in this country now offering these luxuries. BILL.

First race—The possibility of an off-track tomorrow gives Eddie Wrack a good chance to get home in the first race ever run over this course. He has shown speed on dull courses. Befitting, one of the most picked horses now in training, should be no worse than second. Peeper to take care of the others.

Second race—Sandy Mack has the speed of the juvenile party, I do believe, likes the abbreviated distance and I see no reason for mistakes. Richstrike may be better than rated. Edri for a money position.

Fourth race—Agrarian seems the best suited of those accepting the issue at this mile and 70 yards. Gets in with only steadying weight and Litzenberger will have charge of the saddle work. Bold Lover has worked well and may be ready for a hard race. Chatmoss could awake in the mud.

Fifth race—The luck of the Vanderbilt Stable is holding so strong that I'm forced to go to Good Harvest, Bachelor Dinner and Erin Lad. The three cerise and white horses are fit. This is one of the toughest races of the New England season. Mantagna and Boxthorn should be in the thick of the stretch contention.

Sixth race—Should Bright Bird find a drying-out track, he may repeat that winning effort of the Narragansett meeting. Mathias and Prefer seem to have something on the others.

Seventh race—Sun Teatime might find this sprint a race that suits. This one has held speed for some time and will be a keen factor. Cantoris, especially with Fallon in the saddle, will have a fighting chance of scoring at good odds. Jessie D. M. would be dangerous if in action.

Eighth race—Incandescent was never better and gets in a field that may bow. Midshipman is in excellent shape and a possibility. Sandwrack downed a fair field in the Middle West and could make his presence felt here.

Savings Nine Winner; Mensh Stars Afield

Dick Johnson, National Savings & Trust Co. right-hander, held the Riggs Nationals to five hits in a Bankers League game yesterday to pitch his team into the league lead with a 4-to-1 victory. The winners have won six out of seven games. Riggs and American Security & Trust have won four out of five apiece. Benny Mensh, Riggs left fielder, robbed Sam Fox, National Savings slugger, of a home run in the fifth ininng with a Tris Speaker catch while running full tilt with his back to the diamond.

DR. TRAPROCK, showing a decided liking for the going, came very wide entering the stretch, closed with a rush and just lasted to win. PEETER was forced wide on the turn and came very fast. GLENBROOM ran into the lead around the turn but weakened badly. GOLDEN COLOR had plenty of speed, but stopped fast in the final furlong. JACK M. did not like the going.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming price, $2,500. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:05½. Winner, B. B. PRETTY BUSY	112	5	5	5h	5h	5h	Litt'rer	10-1	3-1	7-5

GROG, at home in the going, ran into an early lead, was taken out to the middle of the track in stretch, and easily held race safe. MISS BAM was a bit slow to get into her stride, moved up gamely, and ran a good race. LADY CHARMIAN dropped far out of it in early part and closed with a rush. PRETTY BUSY had speed for three furlongs, then quit. BLUE DONNA was outrun.

THIRD RACE—About six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,300. For 3-year-olds and upward which have not won two races since May 14. Start bad from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:28. Winner, Mrs. A. B. Dodd's br. g. (4), by Ladkin—Black Sea. Trained by A. B. Dodd. GREENSTONE	108	3	1	1½	1h	6½	7	Rose	30-1	12-1	6-1

OCCIDENTAL was much the best. He was rated along in early part and kept well out in the middle of the track, assumed command entering the stretch, and won nicely in hand. LATVICH trailed the field to the final quarter-mile, closed with a rush on the outside and just got up to gain the place. TRANSPORT was hard ridden all the way. SUN LURE had plenty of speed for a half-mile. GREENSTONE was weakly ridden.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. The Briarcliff Handicap. Purse, $1,200 added. For 4-year-olds and upwrad in class C. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:54. Winner, Mrs. Mary Colford's ch. h. (6), by Purchase—Widow Jim. Trained by M. J. Colford. Value to winner, $880; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. MY PURCHASE was away well, was eased back going around paddock turn and, taken to the outside, closed with a rush and was going away at the end. GOLDEN WAY was under restraint to the top of the stretch, where he took the lead, but weakened badly. FLAMING MAMIE had plenty of speed, but stopped badly in the last quarter-mile. FRANK ORMONT moved up fast around turn and then tired.

FIFTH RACE—About six furlongs. The Pocantico. Purse, $900. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:14. Off at 4:14½. PHILIPPI BOY	109	5	6	4h	5h	5h	6	Coucci	18-5	7-5	1-2

BROWN FEATHERS broke alertly, but was eased back around the turn, came through on the inside and, finishing with a rush, won in final nod. RUST, well up, came to the outside in stretch and closed gamely. GOLD BUCKLE was sent to the front with a rush, but weakened badly at end. BRIGHT PHANTOM made a game effort. PHILIPPI BOY broke slow and was kept on the outside all the way.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming price, $1,750. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:38½. MAJOR GENERAL was allowed to rate along to the stretch, where he closed with a rush. MISS RAINBOW was used up racing THUNDERTONE into defeat and tired. MOUNTAIN ELK was kept out in the best going all the way. THUNDERTONE had plenty of speed. CANTIE had no excuse.

7-1 Shot Whips Golden Way At Empire

Heavy Impost Is Too Much for 5-Time Winner; My Purchase Scores.

By the Associated Press.

EMPIRE CITY, N. Y., July 9.—Golden Way, winner of five straight races over various distances and tracks for W. N. Adrians, finally struck a snag here this afternoon. The 5-year-old son of John P. Grier tried to haul 120 pounds through deep, heavy going caused by torrential overnight rain in the Briarcliff Handicap and faltered with the money in sight, losing by three parts of a length to Mrs. Matt Colford's slightly weighted My Purchase, a 7-to-1 shot.

The 6-year-old son of Purchase, dropping ten pounds from his recent Aqueduct effort, was ridden out by Bobby Jones to outfinish the 3-to-5 favorite in a field of four. J. B. Elk's Flaming Mamie, the second choice, was third, two lengths away and four before Frank Ormont. The winner trudged through the mud in 1:48 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

Among those who braved the threat of more rain were Gene Tunney, Lou Gehrig, just returned from the all-star game in Cleveland, and Walter H. Donovan, secretary of the Florida Racing Commission and president of the National Association of Racing Commissioners.

My Purchase on Rail.

Flaming Mamie and Golden Way showed the way around the first turn, with My Purchase following on the rail. The latter was taken to the outside on the back stretch. Frank Ormont joined the leaders around the bend leaving the back stretch as Flaming Mamie faltered on the inside.

Golden Way shot into a narrow advantage turning for home, with My Purchase at his side. Jones got the Colford veteran to the front in the final drive. Frank Ormont stopped and allowed Flaming Mamie to be an easy third.

Jockey G. Rose was suspended indefinitely for an unsatisfactory ride on Greenstone in the third race today, and all entries of I. Perlstein were ordered refused for an indefinite period for the issuance of unsatisfactory instructions to the rider, by order of the stewards.

St. Bernard Sets Mark To Score at Arlington

Chicago, July 9 (AP).—St. Bernard, owned by C. B. Shaffer, of Chicago, galloped the fastest mile of the Chicago racing season today. The 3-year-old son of Bull Dog—Eager Cissy ran the distance in 1:36 at Arlington Park, leading the procession in the Briergate Purse from start to finish. Struggling five lengths back of the victor came Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Sun Portland.

The big disappointment in the race was Mrs. John D. Hertz' Count Arthur, public choice. Count Arthur was never threatening at any time during the journey and finished fourth. St. Bernard paid $13.60.

Cards 69-70 In Decisive 36 Holes

Burton, Malloy, Burrows Also Qualify for National Event.

TURNING in what is believed to be an all-time District competitive record for 72 holes, Claude Rippy, free-swinging 22-year-old municipal star, cracked out brilliant scores of 69 and 70 yesterday on East Potomac's flat courses to win the District public links golf championship and earn the right to captain the Washington Harding Cup team in the national tournament at Indianapolis July 29-August 3, inclusive.

Rippy reached the zenith of his scoring power, shooting the last 36 holes in one under par, and winding up the two-day grind—long considered the toughest in golf—with a smashing total of 282.

The new titleholder, who for two consecutive seasons had watched the championship elude him, was nine strokes lower than the best score ever recorded in 72 holes of medal play hereabouts, and 19 better than the winning total posted by the 1934 champion, John Connelly, who did not compete this season.

Favorites True to Form.

Favorites ran true to form, as Bobby Burton, George Malloy and Ted Burrows, all former qualifiers, who, with Rippy, had been branded as the four men to win places, came through in high-class fashion. Malloy and Burrows played with Rippy during the 72 holes.

Burton, who was one shot back of Rippy with a 144 at the end of the first 36 holes at Rock Creek, finished with 76-68-69-73—286. Malloy, who had tied with Burton at 144, had 73-71-77-74—295, and the old reliable Burrows, in a brilliant last-nine rally, produced rounds of 75-71-77-75—301.

In the event a fifth man is taken on the trip, Eddie Stolark, who finished one stroke back of Burrows, will be the alternate. Stolark had a chance to tie Burrows, but missed a short putt that would have given him a birdie and a 34 on the final nine. He had rounds of 78-73-75-76 for 302.

Three Tie for Sixth.

Three were tied for sixth with 304. They were Andy Oliveri, who was in fourth place at the half-way mark, and took 77-79 yesterday; Bob Leapley, who finished with a fine 73, and Don O'Bryan, whose 80 on the opening round Monday cost him a place.

Rippy was six shots over par for the 72 holes. He scored a 75 in his initial round, and followed with a 68. Yesterday he played virtually flawless golf. His drives were long and accurate, and he split the pin on hole after hole. Unfortunately Rippy didn't get what you might call a break in putting. While he didn't have a 3-putt green for the last 36 holes, he managed to get down in one putt on only six holes. But the fact remains that he was consistent with his putting. He had 33 putts in the morning and 33 in the afternoon.

Clipping a stroke off par, Rippy fired a 35 on his first nine of the morning, after missing an eagle by inches on the ninth hole. He parred the next four holes and, as was the case yesterday, found himself almost stymied by a tree, and took a 5 on the short fifth hole of B side. One over par through the sixteenth, Rippy finished beautifully, laying his tee shot to within a foot of the short seventeenth for a deuce and knocking his niblick to within 2 feet of the pin on the eighteenth hole for a birdie 3 to negotiate the second nine in 34, the 18 in 69.

Burton Even at 54th.

Burton meanwhile ran into one of those inspired rounds and played the first nine in 34 to become even with Rippy with 54 holes to go. Over on the incoming side Burton took 5s on the fifteenth and sixteenth and scored a 35. With his 69 he trailed Rippy by a stroke with 18 to go.

Malloy, with a 77, hung onto third place; Oliveri, with 77, fourth, and Burrows, with 77, fifth.

In the afternoon Rippy picked up a stroke with a birdie on the third hole, and secured eight pars to round the turn in 35. Burton, despite of a birdie 3 on the first hole, where he caught the new champion, ran into a string of 5s—five to be exact—and rolled up a 39 for the outgoing side.

Rippy missed a short putt on the eleventh hole (second of B side), and took a 5, 1 over. He played par golf for the next four holes and took a 5 on the sixteenth hole after playing a weak second.

On the eighteenth, or seventy-second hole, a 281-yarder, Rippy blasted out a terrific drive that landed to the right in heavy rough. He took out his trusty niblick and knocked the ball within a foot of the pin, holed his putt for a birdie 3 and finished with a 70.

Having dissipated his chances on the third nine, Burton staged a great comeback, but to no avail.

Jump of 7 Feet Is Predicted By Negro

Johnson, Coast Star, Is Confident of Attaining "Dream" Height.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The dream high jump—a 7-foot leap—was promised to the athletic world today by Cornelius Johnson, California's "black kangaroo."

Johnson, a tall, slender Negro from Los Angeles who has cleared the bar at the amazing height of 6 feet 10¼ inches, expressed unhedging confidence in his ability to make 7 feet before finishing competition.

"And that's just about 2 inches under what I believe will be the ultimate ceiling for high jumpers," continued the 21-year-old national indoor and outdoor champion. "I don't believe any human ever will jump higher than 7 feet 2 inches."

Improves With Age.

"I feel certain of making 7 feet before I'm through," he explained, "because I'm only 21 now. I've been improving ever since I first entered competition in 1930, and should continue to improve until I'm about 25—unless I'm injured meanwhile."

Johnson, who coincidentally started jumping for the same reason that Glenn Cunningham and Bill Bonthron started running—because of a badly burned leg—listed his improvement as follows:

In 1930 he jumped 6 feet; 1931 jumped 6 feet 4 inches; 1932 jumped 6 feet 6⅝ inches; 1933 jumped 6 feet 7½ inches; 1934 jumped 6 feet 8⅝ inches and in 1935 jumped 6 feet 10¼ inches.

This 6-foot 10¼-inch leap was made in practice, hence it does not stand as a record. However, Johnson claims several officials at his school, Compton Junior College, measured the height. The official world record is held by Walter Marth, of Fresno, Calif., who may be out of competition permanently because of a rupture. Marty's mark is 6 feet 9½ inches. It was made in April, 1934.

Norfolk Attendance Leads in Piedmont

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 9.—Norfolk fans led the league in attendance upon Piedmont League games during the first half of the baseball season, according to unofficial figures compiled here today.

The Tars, who were the 1934 champions and who ran second to Asheville in the first half this summer, drew spectators estimated at 40,000 through the gates of the park in Norfolk during the first-half pennant race.

Asheville, the first-half winner, was second in attendance with a total of 36,000 spectators. Richmond was third in this respect, Owner Eddie Mooers figuring the total at 28,000, a slight increase over 1935.

Defeats Sleepy Creek Club, 7 to 5 and 4 to 3.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 9.—The Martinsburg A. C. won a double-header from the Sleepy Creek (W. Va.) Club there, the first game, 7-5, and the nightcap, a five-inning affair, 4-3.

Both games were hotly contested, Martinsburg getting 12 hits in the opener and Sleepy Creek 10. W. and G. Faulkwell and Copenhaver led the hitting for the winners. A four-run rally in the fourth inning of the nightcap enabled the locals to nose out the Morgan Countians, who outhit the winners and scored in the third, fourth and fifth. Crabb, of the winners, was the only player on either side getting more than one hit in the second game.

Howell's Va. Victory His Most Cherished

By Joseph E. Nettles,

Associated Press Staff Writer.

RICHMOND, Va., July 9.—To Billy Howell, the Richmond youngster who went to the semifinals of the National Amateur in 1931 and later played on the Walker Cup team, the sweetest victory he ever won was the triumph Sunday that gave him his fourth State amateur golf title.

There was not half the fanfare and the blowing of trumpets; no one gave him an automobile as his overjoyed well wishers did four years ago; no one predicted, as many had predicted then, that the blond Richmonder would reach golfdom's pinnacle.

But for Billy it was a battle of vindication.

The whispered prediction, "He can't come back," had become a shouted prophecy when Howell, who had been through golfing's mill and out, entered the State Amateur at Hot Springs the other day.

Reached U. S. Semifinals.

Seven years ago, a 16-year-old school boy, he had triumphed over the same Cascades course. On he went to the semifinals of the National Amateur while front-page streamers told the story to an almost delirious home-town audience.

He played golf on the Walker Cup team. He won three State championships. Twice he won the Middle Atlantic crown.

He was Billy the Kid, the fair-haired lad. Then he became Billy, the "ex-," the former champ. "Through, washed up."

Almost everyone believed it except Billy. He himself was almost convinced this summer at Virginia Beach when Ed Semmler, the Baltimore flash, put him out in the quarter-finals of the Middle Atlantic. He almost believed it when he failed to make the qualifying grade in the Southern amateur while Bobby Riegel, a pantalooned kid when Billy's star was in the ascendancy, marched through the fast field to the title.

Billy was being talked about in the past tense when he went to Hot Springs. Few persons became excited when he earned a tie for the medal in the qualifying round. Not even when he laid down a birdie on the seventeenth and sank a 10-foot putt for a deuce on the short eighteenth to get that tie.

He whipped Jimmy Watts, of Lynchburg; he whipped Al Dollins, of Covington, and then—

Bobby Riegel had him three down after five holes of the 36-hole final. But when the match ended on the thirty-first green it was Billy, not Bobby, who won, 6 and 5.

For Billy the victory was "the best of them all." He needed it.

He won with a deadly short game that atoned for occasional poorly-hit irons. Time and again he pitched dead to the pin to get his pars the hard way.

It wasn't spectacular golf. It wasn't Billy's best golf. It was grim, winning golf and Billy wanted to win.

Big Leaguers, After Oriental Trip, Failed to Regain Form

By Dillon Graham,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

For some reason or other a majority of them are playing far below their 1934 form. Charley Gehringer, the crack Detroit second baseman; Jimmy Foxx, Philadelphia's first baseman; Hal Warstler, the A's second baseman, and Clint Brown, Cleveland pitcher, are exceptions.

Gehringer, hitting around .340, still is about tops among the Keystone bag fenders. Although not batting as well as in other years, Jimmy Foxx is doing quite well with his .320 average. Warstler, who ousted Dib Williams as Philadelphia's second baseman, is hitting just under .300. Brown is having a good year.

And Bing Miller, of the Boston Red Sox, is doing well as a pinch hitter and in his occasional turns in the outfield. But little can be said for the others.

First Baseman Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees, has improved after a slow start, but still is in the worst batting slump of his career.

Shortstop Eric McNair, of the A's, has been over the .300 mark only a few times this year. Outfielder Babe Ruth was unconditionally released by the Boston Braves and Outfielder Earl Averill, of Cleveland, hasn't found the hitting range.

Catcher Frank Hayes was released by the A's. Pitcher Vernon Gomez, of the Yankees, is having a poor year. Pitcher Joe Cascarella was sent to the minors by the A's but was taken on by Boston. Earl Whitehill, the Washington southpaw, has never found his best form. Moe Berg, catcher, was released by Cleveland and is doing reserve duty with the Boston Red Sox.

Gallico Scores Half-Hearted All-Stars

Nationals' Great Players Seemed Uninclined to Rally.

the score at least, the monotony of nine put-outs by the various hired hands of the American League was relieved by only one double on the part of Catcher Jimmy Wilson.

Stars Roll Grounders.

Master Mel Harder, of Cleveland, is a very fine pitcher but he should not be able to get rid of Martin, Vaughn, Ott, Medwick, Collins and Moore in a row in the closing innings of what should be the world's greatest ball game. But those six athletes went out very tamely indeed, according to my score card, not one of them managing to get the ball out of the infied, much less make a safe hit. Now, mind, this is not an accusation against those young men, because when you can't hit you just can't hit.

No doubt the Messrs. Ruth, Gehrig and Foxx would have liked to have smashed one off Hubbell in last year's all-star game while he was engaged in striking them out. But that was early in the game, and the American Leaguers eventually won. They have now won three in a row. I merely feel that if the Nationals would try a little harder and take the game more seriously and really bear down, say as old Dizzy Dean bore down in that inning he pitched, the customers would get more of a run for their money.

Dizzy Fogs Foxx.

And speaking of old Diz I thought he was trying to throw that baseball clear through his catcher and out through the closed end of the stadium. He burned those first four balls past Jimmy Foxx so fast that it was almost impossible to see them in transit. About the only reason Foxx got a base on balls was because he didn't have time to strike at any of the pitches, and he couldn't see anything to strike at. Diz was as he calls it—"foggin' in."

I would like to repeat my suggestion that next year's game be made a double-header. One game seems all too short to let the stars appear, especially before such tremendous crowds. The All-Star pitching staffs could easily divide up the assignments, and there is enough reserve material on hand to take care of two games. As it is now, a player appears only in one or two plays and then retires, or is replaced, and doesn't see much action. The fans get a thrill when his name is announced, and that is about the end of it. A double-header would be a fairer test for both leagues and for all the players. And if the magnates REALLY wanted to give the fans a thrill they could concern themselves with figuring out some scheme to let the fans in the park vote by voice or demonstration as to what replacements should be made.

Cumberland May Shift In Interstate League

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 9.—The Cumberland Colts, a leading team in the Cumberland and George's Creek Baseball League for three seasons, are expected to take over the Potomac Edison franchise in the Interstate League.

It was pointed out today that Potomac Edison will lose its $50 forfeit fee if it withdraws from the circuit. The Colts probably will have to reimburse the Bushmen for that amount as well as file a similar forfeit in order to secure the P. E. franchise, according to an official of one club.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., July 9.—Brunswick continued its winning streak by defeating Middletown in the Tri-County League, embracing Frederick, Carroll and Montgomery counties, 17 to 11; Damascus set back Church Hill, 13 to 12 in 11 innings; Walkersville took the measure of Frederick, 7 to 4; Wakefield put it over on Mount Airy, 18 to 15, and Cedar Grove won from New Market, 13 to 10. The Jefferson-Point of Rocks game was postponed on account of rain.

The Brunswick-Middletown tilt was even until the sixth inning when a home run by Gosnell with Walker on base gave the Railroaders a lead that was not overcome. Huffer started on the mound and Hawes finished for the winners and Shank, Ohler and Koontz worked for the Valleyites. Mahone hit for the circuit with two Brunswick runners on bases in the third and W. Rudy made a round trip blow for Middletown.

First one team and then the other went into the lead in the Damascus-Church Hill tilt until the ninth inning when the score was even 11-all. In the first half of the eleventh Church Hill broke the deadlock by chalking up one run. In the last half a pass, two singles and an infield out counted for two runs for Damascus that won the game. H. Bureette and James hit home runs.

A pair of southpaws tangled when Lefty Warrenfeltz, Walkersville, faced "Snook" Kline, making his first appearance for Frederick. Warrenfeltz held the locals to four hits and fanned 12. The Glade Valley team took an early lead and sewed up the game in the seventh when, with one down, three singles, balk, two fielders' choices and a steal home by Zimmerman, netted four runs.

New Market and Cedar Grove indulged in a free-hitting, free-scoring contest, with New Market scoring six and Cedar Grove four in the fifth inning. Each team crossed the plate four times in the first frame, Cedar Grove going into the lead in the second with three more. Ralston LeGore, Cedar Grove's big right-hander, was sent to the mound in the sixth inning and he set the losers down with one hit in the last four innings.

Clubs were freely used in the Mount Airy-Wakefield game, with odds in favor of Mount Airy. Barnes went the route for the winners, while Campbell, Crouse and Norris toiled in the box for Mount Airy. Wakefield won in the seventh inning on a batting rally that yielded nine runs. Boyer hit a homer for Mount Airy in the ninth.

Baer's Hands Get Hospital Treatment

Ex-Champion to Arrive at Johns Hopkins Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Max Baer is going in for repairs. The former heavyweight champion of the world is going to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore tomorrow for treatment of his injured hands.

"We've been told of so many ways to have them fixed up," said Ancil Hoffman, the fighter's manager, "that we've decided to go to Johns Hopkins. Some doctors say put them in a cast for 30 days and then they'll be alright, while others declare an operation is necessary.

"Whatever the Baltimore doctors tell us ought to be done will be done. We have a number of tempting offers for fights in the fall, but I'm not going to consider any of them seriously until Baer's hands are well again."

Yesterday Dr. William Healey, New York, suggested the trip to Baltimore. He constructed a special splint for the badly bruised knuckle on the middle finger of Baer's left hand. Baer and Hoffman will fly to Baltimore tomorrow.

Rothenburg Cables.

Hoffman said he received a cablegram from Walter Rothenburg, German promoter, announcing proposed arrangements for a Baer-Max Schmeling fight in Amsterdam, Holland, in September. Rothenburg guaranteed Baer $100,000, Hoffman said.

"It sounds good—like all the others do—but we'll have to see how Max's hands respond to treatment," Hoffman said. "Anyway, Rothenburg will have to lay the money on the line before we'd budge from this country."

Hoffman said he also has offers for Baer to meet either Joe Louis, the Detroit Negro, or Schmeling here in the fall.

3 Changes Listed For All-Star Duel

less Bill Walker, who started and lost the interleague battle. Frankie Frisch, the team manager, was "on the spot" but it wasn't his own fault. He was ill himself and unable to play, but refused to yield any ground to the "second-guessers."

The Americans took the game in stride, too, but it looks as they still carry too much heavy artillery for the opposition to spike. Babe Ruth, whose homer won the first all-star game, is gone. Earl Averill, a big gun in the second contest, was unable to play. Lou Gehrig has yet to get a hit in three games and Hank Greenberg, the heavy howitzer of the current pennant season, was not even invited to participate, but Jimmie Foxx took a turn at blasting the enemy this year, with signal success.

Hit in Last Inning Robs Hurler of Perfect Game

Warrenton, Va., July 9.—A single by Herring in the ninth inning robbed Lucian Spain, new pitcher of the Springs A. C. of a no-hit, no-run game against the Remington ball club here. Spain fanned 11 men and walked none, his team winning, 10—0.

Gasoline Taxes $735,136,000 For Last Year

Federal and State Levy Made on 15.4 Billion Gallons of Fuel.

New York, July 9.—State taxes on gasoline reached a new high total of $568,027,000 in 1934, and, added to Federal gasoline taxes of $170,109,000, increased the cost of motor fuel by a grand total of $735,136,000.

Reports of 1934 State gasoline tax collections, received from the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads by the American Petroleum Industries committee, indicate that receipts from this source were roundly $47,000,000 higher than the $518,196,000 collections of 1933 and approximately $30,000,000 higher than the previous peak income, $536,397,000, collected in 1931.

New York State again collected the largest amount, $43,927,000, or $583,000 more in 1933. Ohio was second with $37,618,000, or $3,697,000 more than in 1933. California was third with $35,960,000, representing an increase of $743,000. Pennsylvania was fourth with $33,409,000, an increase of $2,670,000.

Only two increases in State tax rates were made during the year. The Arkansas tax rate was raised to 6½ cents per gallon from 6 cents on February 3. Colorado's 4-cent rate was increased to 5 cents between February 1 and September 1. The bureau's report showed the weighted average tax rate for 1933 to be 3.66 cents per gallon. This is increased 1 cent per gallon by the Federal tax.

Taxes Were $26,968,000.

Taxes were paid upon 15,454,481,000 gallons of gasoline in 1934 as compared with 14,224,321,270 in 1933, indicating not only an increase in consumption but also improved enforcement of gasoline tax laws. Refunds, representing exemption from taxation for gasoline used for purposes other than propelling motor vehicles on highways, amounted to $26,968,000, with no comparable figure for 1933 available.

The bureau's new report form did not reveal the cost of collecting State gasoline taxes, which is paid largely by distributors of gasoline. The committee estimates, however, that this cost exceeds $22,500,000.

The 1934 collections of both Federal and State taxes are estimated by the committee to have increased the total cost of gasoline taxation since 1919, when the first State levy was imposed, to approximately $4,250,000,000.

Gasoline taxation is on the way to stabilization, and also to a permanent place in the tax structure, it is indicated by Prof. Finla G. Crawford, of Syracuse University, in his fourth survey of motor-fuel taxes. The survey has been published by the Public Administration Service, 850 East Fifty-eighth street, Chicago, Ill., in book form under the title, "Gasoline Tax in the United States, 1934." As in previous surveys, the 1934 report covers the history of the tax, its administration, exemptions and refunds, distribution of revenue, diversion, evasion, constitutionality, etc.

Blight Advances Wheat 4 Cents

Corn and Oats Also Make Gains.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 9.—Wheat prices were whirled upward four cents a bushel today with an increasing influx of black rust reports from widely scattered sections of the spring crop belt. Today's spurt on top of Monday's less significant advance increased the price upturn from bottom levels established during last week's break to approximately six cents. Other corn closed ⅛@1⅞ up, September, 76⅛@76¼; oats, ⅞@1 cent higher, and rye, 1⅞@2¼ higher. Barley was unchanged.

Pound Climbs To a New High

Reaches 4.98¼ as Gold Currencies Move Upward.

By the Associated Press.

The pound sterling yesterday continued to climb to new high levels for 1935 against the dollar in the principal exchange markets of the world. Continental gold moneys were likewise strong for a time, but by the close in New York both gold and sterling-bloc currencies had lost most or all of their early strength.

The pound sterling ended off ⅛ cent in New York at $4.96½, after having been as high as $4.98¼ at one time. In London the dollar was easy as $4.98 5-16 to the pound.

French francs finished .00½ of a cent improved in the American market at 6.64 cents after touching 6.65. In Paris the dollar gave a little ground at the equivalent of 6.641 cents to the franc.

Oliver Reorganization Plan Is Opposed

Chicago, July 9.—Robert Mensel, of Chicago, and Max J. Brown, of South Bend, Ind., are sending letters to stockholders of the Oliver Farm Equipment Co., urging opposition to the proposed plan of recapitalization, which is to be acted upon at an adjourned annual meeting to be held July 19.

Brown and Mensel say that adoption of the plan would be inimical to the interests of shareholders.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

	Tues.	Mon.
Advances	305	414
Declines	291	162
Unchanged	186	168
Total issues	782	744

Stocks—Efforts to carry through previous resistance levels met failure and a strong early rally led by carriers subsided to modest advances and nominal losses at the close. There were 1,345,030 shares sold.

Bonds—Corporates held steady in the main with a few issues making sizable girations. Federals were a trifle mixed. Southern Railway loans recovered their poise and bounded up 2 to 3 points in heavy demand on short covering. The action served in part to explain recent weakness of the issue. Transfers aggregated $10,070,000.

Curb—Mining issues were strong and utilities were irregular in active trading which approximated 235,000 shares.

Grains — Reported increasing damage by black rust pushed wheat prices up as much as 4 cents. Corn and oats also were strong. July wheat last at 84 and July corn at 82⅛.

Cotton—Futures advanced 11 to 13 points on trade buying. July closed at 12.08.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.29. Refined the same at 5.25 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7 last at 6⅞ and Santos No. 4 last at 8.

Brazil Has Destroyed Huge Total of Coffee

New York, July 9.—Brazil destroyed 1,013,000 bags of coffee during the first six months of 1935, according to cables to the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange, against 3,299,000 bags during the similar 1934 period. Since the start of the program in June, 1931, 35,121,000 bags have been destroyed.

During the crop year ended June 30, this year, Brazilian destruction totaled 5,980,000 bags while shipments amounted to 13,757,000 bags for the 12-month period, a total disappearance of 19,737,000 bags.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Hold Firm in More Active Trading With Average Prices at New High Level—Sterling Advances—Wheat Jumps.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 9.—Prevailing trends in financial markets were upward. Treasury bonds were easier, in spite of the success of the latest note offering, but corporation bonds rose a little. Commodity markets looked a bit fresher. Wheat was buoyant, on repetition of the black rust stories and some reassurance over the Canadian crop menace. September futures closed 4 cents higher at 84⅞ cents a bushel. The weakest section was foreign exchange. Sterling now has risen to within touching distance of $5. Stock turnover was around 1,400,000 shares, slightly larger than yesterday. Prices for most issues were best in the early trading, but profit taking was not heavy.

Singularly clear of news affecting prices, the way for financial markets led upward. The motive power for the strength in most issues was the continued press of investment funds and the hardening opinion that the bull market has less to fear now than it had at any time since recovery began, three years ago. The inflation idea is slack at the moment, although it still is in the back of many minds, but that in itself is a bull point, for memory is keen of the slump that followed the inflationary jazz of the early summer of 1933.

Without inflation to worry it, the market is looking to the abundance of cheap bank credit begging to go into speculative use, the slow improvement in corporation earnings and the return of market-mindedness on the part of the public. Congress, to be sure, still is in session and the Administration is as vague and threatening as ever, but the political side looks less unfavorable than it did. Its traditional check, the temper of the American people, is beginning to work once more. Business isn't to be allowed to shrivel up, and men who make money and handle it are not going to be used for long as outcasts from society.

Unemployment and Taxes.

Many perplexing problems remain to be solved. Unemployment is high. Heavier taxes loom. Socialistic legislation is in the making. Most of the worry over such matters can quickly dissolve, once the wheels of industry turn a bit faster. Disappointment may be around the corner, but the stock market does not think so.

Group movements in stocks were less pronounced than yesterday. The laggard rails came forward for a while, and that encouraged their holders and those who chart the market course on the basis of one group supporting another. Steel shares meanwhile rested, but held their previous day's gains well. Steel common topped 37. The strongest rails were Delaware & Hudson, Santa Fe, and Illinois Central. Southern Railway felt relief from selling pressure and rallied a point or so.

Along with the rails, Western Union revived and made a new high price. Motors continued buoyant and the leading issues lengthened their climbs for the year. Tobaccos also were strong, with the American group going above previous high prices. Building construction stocks looked tired.

Allied Chemical at New High.

In the list of stocks reaching new high prices for the year over 100, included many specialties. Among the stocks to distinguish themselves with new high prices were: Allied Chemical, Allis Chalmers, Safety Razor, Tobacco, Beech-Nut, Briggs, Chrysler, Corn Products, du Pont, Eastman, General Motors, Harvester, Lehman, Loew's, McKeesport, National Steel, Norfolk & Western, Procter & Gamble, Sears Roebuck, Underwood, Union Carbide, Western Union and Westinghouse.

Copper stocks were firmer and the silvers, in spite of weakness in the metal, rose 1 to 2 points. Silver King and St. Joseph lead were strong and more active. Bohn Aluminum gave up more than a point. Farm and mail order stocks were cheerful on the further sharp rise in wheat.

Money markets were dull. Dollars sagged further against sterling. Some explained the movement on the basis of a flow of funds to London for special purposes, and others favored the silver price decline factor as governing the rise in sterling in terms of dollars.

Canada's Wheat Crop To Exceed Last Year's

Toronto, July 9.—"Well-distributed rains in western Canada have resulted in more uniformly good crop conditions than have existed for several years," said S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, today. "Warm weather is now needed in order to hasten growth in sections where the crop is late. The trade estimates that the Canadian spring wheat crop will be 75,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels larger than last year's.

"An especially good feature of the prairie agricultural situation is the great improvement in pasturage and grazing conditions, as a result of which cattle, formerly weakened by a prolonged season of short feed supplies, are rapidly rounding into normal shape and dairying is making up for ground lost in the winter and spring."

During the past decade Davis has taken an active interest in numerous philanthropic enterprises. He has been affiliated also with a number of local building and loan associations.

Peoples Sales Gain.

A gain in gross sales of more than a $1,000,000 during the first six months of 1935, as compared with the same period of 1934, was reported yesterday by Peoples Drug Stores.

For the first half of 1935 the total sales amounted to $9,087,120, as compared with $8,025,732 during the same months of the preceding year.

Cottonseed Oil And Lard Wage Market War

Crown Prince of South Challenges Champion of the Midwest.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 9.—Cottonseed oil, crown prince of the South, has gained the attention of Wall street commodity dealers in its battle with lard, champion of the Midwest.

Market authorities point out that production of lard has declined rapidly while the use of cotton oil has spiralled upward. Lard stocks as of June 1 were the smallest in 12 years, 91,708,000 pounds, or 50 per cent under last year and about 30 per cent under the average of the past five years. But these authorities add that the low point in the production of hogs apparently has been reached, according to an analysis based on the long-term hog production cycle.

The domestic supply of cottonseed oil on May 1 amounted to some 1,750,000 barrels, a decrease of about 870,000 barrels from 1934, and this total of foreign and domestic oil is counted on to meet the Nation's needs until the new cotton crop arrives in October.

Around 2,600,000 barrels of oil are expected to be pressed from seed of the new cotton crop, leaving a total supply of some 3,500,000 barrels. There is, however, the complication of foreign importations of oil with which domestic producers are contending.

A survey by the New York Produce Exchange revealed that foreign production usually is from seed grown in India, Egypt, China, Russia, Brazil and Peru. A decline in the vegetable oil industry in Egypt has been noted by the United States Department of Commerce since its peak in 1919, and today in Egypt there are modern cottonseed oil presses in only five places.

From such indications, authorities believe there should be no immediate dangerous threat to the power of the crown prince from foreign sources, and in addition there is the additional protection of an import duty of three cents a pound on foreign oil.

All of the production of the affiliated producers will be sold through the agency which will assess a commission of 9 mills per ton.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading was quiet on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities were unaffected by the new ten million sterling Indian loan, the former being supported by investors. Industrials and gold mining shares eased due to lack of support, while strength was maintained in the oils, rubbers and transatlantic issues. The closing tone was irregular.

Paris—Rentes improved on the bourse as anxiety diminished regarding the domestic political situation. International shares were strong with the exception of Suez, which lost more than a hundred points. The closing tone improved.

Berlin—Selling in the late hours offset earlier strength on the bourse, which closed lower.

Two Sandlot Games Hold Interest

Miller and Pig 'n' Whistle, Grays and Cabin John to Clash Sunday.

THE second-half pennant in the National City A League is not too remotely connected with the outcome of Sunday's battle between Miller Furniture and Pig 'n' Whistle, the two "dark horse" favorites to capture Post Association honors in the final stretch. Like nine out of ten games, it appears that pitching will be the deciding factor, which leaves it entirely up to Francis Peffer and Joe Porter, the probable mound rivals in Sunday's contest.

The Mount Rainier Grays-Cabin John game in the Maryland County loop stands out as another fracas that has all the aspects of a championship final. The Cabin Boys barely nosed the Grays out in the last encounter between these foes, staging a desperate two-run rally to eke out a 4-to-3 decision. The Grays will tell the world they have a better team. Sunday they have an opportunity to prove it. The pitchers will be Billy Ligget and Howard Cranston, according to the latest reports.

The Takoma Park A. C., which has set the semipro title of the District, Maryland and Virginia as its goal, is seeking to prove its claim against the best semipro nines in the vicinity, especially Frederick, Harrisonburg, Annapolis and St. Mary's Celtics.

The Takoma Club has been impressive in its four victories since its debut in the local field. A glance at its line-up reveals a wealth of baseball talent.

Bill Carpenter, whose pitching ability warranted him a trial with the Boston Braves, is the mainstay of the mound staff. Don Bomba, erstwhile George Washington University gridiron satellite, does the catching. Further up in the batting order there are Shortstop Stump Talburt, formerly of the Virginia League; Al Scoville, an outfielder, who roamed about with the House of David Team and Bobby Lenox, who won service stripes in the International League while playing for Rochester.

The Majestic Radio Nine will travel to West Point, Va., Saturday, to play the strong Chesapeake A. C. in two games over the week-end. The Chesapeake Team boasts an enviable winning streak of 27 straight games. All Majestic players will leave Saturday morning at 9 o'clock from Tenth and H streets northwest.

The Chevy Chase Grays seek a game for Sunday. Call Cleveland 8770.

Glen Echo Aquatics Draw Speedy Stars

Record-Holding Women to Swim on Monday.

Margaret Hoffman and Marie Duvall, popular local water sprites, are among the entrants in the National Junior Diving Championship meet to be staged at Crystal Pool, Glen Echo Park, Monday night at 8:30.

Miss Hoffman, former member of the 1932 Olympic Team, holds the record for the 200-yard breaststroke, 220-yard breaststroke, and 220-meter breaststroke. Miss Duvall holds the high board and low board titles in Washington and won second place in junior national competition at Glen Echo in 1933 and in New York in 1934.

Among other entrants are Bob Knight, and Robert and Daniel Weiner. More than 50 ace swimmers and divers from Washington and out of town are expected to file entries with Boyd Hickman, supervisor of Crystal Pool before Thursday.

sprint. He said afterward it was his first 2-mile race in competition. He has been timed for the mile in 4:14.5. Formerly a competitor for Washington State Normal, he is now a graduate student at Stanford University.

A new "world record" was claimed for the flashy New York A. C. quartet in the 1,000-meter Swedish relay. The event, new to this country, is not on the official world record list authorized by the International A. A. F., but the winners' time of 1 minute 58.1 seconds was six-tenths of a second faster than the best previous listed performance, made by an American team consisting of Eulace Peacock, Bob Kane, Glenn Hardin and Ben Eastman at Oslo, Norway, last summer.

The N. Y. A. C. quartet, running consecutive legs of 100, 200, 300 and 400 meters, consisted of Willard Allen, John Kunitzsky, Milton Flewellen and James McPoland.

Eddie O'Brien Defeated.

Bringing together a flock of national champions, most of whom are headed for European trips, the meet developed several surprises. One was the defeat of Eddie O'Brien, of Syracuse, national 400-meter champion, by Ivan Fuqua, of Indiana, in the 300-yard run. Another was the poor showing of the two California sprinters, Foy Draper, of Los Angeles, and George Anderson, Olympic Club, who were fourth and fifth in the 100-yard dash.

Fifty-four-year-old Pat McDonald, white-haired police officer and veteran of many national championship triumphs, outstripped three youthful competitors for the 56-pound weight toss, for height, and did it with only one hand. Pat's opening heave cleared the bar at 10 feet, nearly 3 feet short of the American record for this old-time event.

Rippy's 282 Wins Public Links Title

He shot the next eight holes in 1 under par and stood on the last tee needing a birdie for a 32. His second finished to the left of the green and he 3-putted from 15 feet, taking a 5 for a 34 and a 73 for the last 18.

Burrows' last-nine rally was one of the day's features. After taking a 41, 5 over par, on the outgoing side of the afternoon, the three-time former champion returned to form and shot nine consecutive pars, finally holing a 6-footer for a 34 and a qualifying berth.

By Morgan Baker.

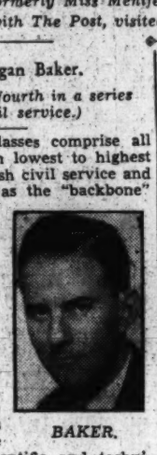
CLERICAL classes comprise all grades from lowest to highest in the British civil service and are referred to as the "backbone" of the service.



BAKER.

The clerical classes were found to be somewhat sharply set off in the English tradition, from the specialist classes comprising the professional, scientific and technical staffs. With rare exceptions, members of this latter group find no opportunity to rise to the highest administrative posts, such as permanent undersecretary or assistant secretary, which are reserved to the younger men in the administrative class.

The manipulative and minor grades comprise the bulk of the postoffice staff, and range through a large number of specific classes.

Basic classification of the British civil service, including the numbers of each class according to the latest available figures as compiled by the royal commission on the civil service, follow:

Clerical Classes.

Administrative	1,140
Executive (general)	4,357
Executive (departmental)	11,050
Clerical (general)	23,265
Clerical (departmental)	16,577
Clerical (temporary)	17,325
Writing assistants	5,241
Stenographers, typists	4,279
Unestablished typing staff	3,232
Commissioners of taxes staff	3,811
Total	90,277

Miscellaneous Classes.

Inspectorates	2,154
Professional, scientific and technical staffs	6,504
Subordinate supervisory and technical staffs	8,722
Minor and manipulative	178,391
Messengers, porters, etc.	16,670
Total	212,441

Classification practice differs in Great Britain in several respects from typical American practice, in part revealing differences in opinion as to the character of an effective classification and in part reflecting the greater attention which has been given to classification in America.

A significant point is seen in the general clerical group. The British classification comprises a small number of broadly defined classes, differentiated primarily on the basis of responsibility rather than duties, as compared with the characteristic American classification, which emphasizes a narrow range of carefully defined duties.

Thus there are only four basic clerical classes in the English civil service, as follows: (a) writing assistant, (b) clerical, (c) executive, and (d) administrative.

Recruitment is direct into each class, but with considerable opportunity for promotion from one class to another. These classes cover all clerical employments from the junior file clerk to the permanent head of the department, and may be compared with the large number of gradings which are found in the American Federal clerical classified service. "Senior clerical" and "higher executive" posts are recognized variants of the classes indicated.

Classification will be discussed further tomorrow.

Reorganization of the Navy League reminds us that Ben A. Shaw (P), Coast Guard, Treasury, won a medal and some gold coins for the best article on "Preparedness" in a contest conducted by the league back in 1916.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

LIBERIA, black republic of Africa, sponsored by and patterned after the United States Government, is America's only foreign colony. Nestled on the west coast of the African continent, a tiny patch on the map equal in area to a square 200 miles on a side, it is the only Negro republic in the world. It is Negro to the limit—white men may not vote, they can not hold office, they can not even own land without express permission of the black government.

The country was established with the aid of the United States and the Colonization Society of America to provide a free land for freed American slaves. The first colonization came long before the Civil War freed all slaves, but many from the Northern States went to Africa to build a nation for their own people.

Settlers patterned their government after that of the United States, having their own declaration of independence and constitution. The ruling class consists now of about 20,000 descendants of former American slaves. Coast natives numbering about 50,000 have adopted the ways and language of the Americo-Liberians, but in the interior are more than 2,000,000 blacks, most of them half savage.

Strange as it seems, however, the very nation that was founded on the freedom of slaves, has permitted virtual slavery in its own borders. Workers have been taken by armed force to slave for plantation masters, and the Americo-Liberians have long ago won a reputation for tyranny over the native blacks.

WHY SHOP ENDLESSLY for a used upright or grand piano when right under one roof you may see, test and compare prices of good used pianos in great variety? You'll see, too, the wisdom of buying instruments thoroughly reconditioned or rebuilt by Kimball factory experts, including guaranteed service without additional cost following purchase. These Kimball advantages are seldom realized in dealing elsewhere, while the additional expense, contingent in purchasing pianos at auction or private sales, results severely upon the price of so-called bargains. Visit Kimball's before you buy, not afterwards. 721 11th st. nw., 3 doors north of Palais Royal.

WONDERFUL BARGAIN in high-grade grand piano. Used scarcely 7 months and just returned from one of Washington's finest homes. Credits allowed for fine upright and cash paid to date. Save this instrument now reduced $210.00. Inspect tomorrow if you expect to secure this real bargain. W. W. Kimball Co., 721 11th st. nw.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

The Passing of Frugality, Pa.

("The Postoffice Department has dropped from the lists the town of Frugality, Pa. The town of New Deal, Mont., has been added, with Abbie McClammy as postmistress."—News item).

Oh, pity the lot
Of Frugality, Penn.—
Now put on the spot
By Big Jim and his men!

A town neat and quaint
Frugality ain't
In esteem any more.

It doesn't sound right
In this prodigal day,
So out of our sight
Must Frugality stay.

Frugality? Ah,
I remember the time
When Frugality, Pa.,
Didn't sound like a crime!

Frugality? Bah!
Let the town disappear!
For it gives such a jar
To the present-day ear.

Such townships, I feel,
Pain our old Uncle Sammy,
So three cheers for New Deal—
And for Abbie McClammy!

Mussolini and the Lightning.

Lightning struck a plane in which Mussolini was doing some war boosting. Benito will probably make a war on Providence unless there is an immediate apology.

* * * *

A bolt of lightning hit his plane—
Benito, scowling black,
Just grabbed it and with might and main
He threw that lightning back!

"How dare you hurl those bolts at me?"
He cried and muttered, "Damn!
It certainly is clear to me
You don't know who I am!"

Typographical Error.

W. H. B. suggests that the President's "Must" legislation should be changed to "Mussed."

Ima Dodo, when asked if she had read any share the wealth literature, said, "Oh, yes. You mean that book called, 'The Great Divide'!"

The Office Punster says that Helen Wills Moody's victory was due to the fact she never strayed from the straight and osteopath.

Mussolini announces that nothing can stop his war on Ethiopia. Unless, perhaps, somebody can interest him in a war with the Singer Midgets.

Bandits held up golfers on a New Jersey course the other day, and to this department they are the top optimists of the robbery business. If a man is ever short of money it is when he is on a golf course. As a matter of fact he seldom has a wooden tee to spare and rarely has an extra cigarette.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Stymied By Harry J. Tuthill

So the Count is gone, eh? What a smash career a person with his complete coverage in whiskers could have had as a bodyman, eh?
After he bowed and scraped his way out, I sat here for hours thinking about Gus and Ollie. Them renting out our rooms.
Gus is still in town. I heard he's wearing my gray suit, too. Also he's figured out some way to get my No. 9 shoes on his No. 12 puppies.
Those people. My own sister. Robbing us. Ugh!
I was told that the suit is so tight he can't sit down, and the shoes are so small he can't stand up.
I stopped worrying about the downs Ollie took after she had been gone long enough to squeeze into them just once.
Ha! No wonder we get hot flashes every time anyone even mentions the word relative to us.
Ever since Gus got away from here I've been praying I'd catch him. Now I realize that if he sees me first and starts running in that suit, it will be just too bad.

On the Air Today

When N. B. C. announced that the hissing and rumbling of Mount Vesuvius would be broadcast from the crater June 30 we wondered what would happen if Vesuvius should go on a rampage that day. But, we reflected, a person also could speculate on the Monument toppling over just as he reached the top, too. Such things, we reasoned, just never happen.

But it did happen in the case of John F. Royal's international broadcast from Vesuvius. The old volcano awakened with the most devastating eruption in years on July 3, just a matter of hours after Royal, his engineers and representatives of the Italian Broadcasting Co. had completed their broadcast to the States. N. B. C. equipment remaining in the crater was destroyed and molten lava ate up the cable leading from the broadcast site.

"It would have been one of the greatest broadcasts in radio," Royal commented. But he said nothing about "I wish I had been there."

• • • •

And that is one good radio story that didn't spring from a press agent's imagination. We have known publicity men who would not hesitate to take credit for the Dionne quints but none who could talk Vesuvius into a display of fireworks.

Honors for the neatest trick of the week go to Ted Church, of Columbia. Luncheon at a cool spot Saturday conflicted with a yen to hear the first network broadcast by "The Three Little Words." So Ted put new batteries in his portable receiver, dropped into the garden of Jene's, hooked the aerial to the wire screening supporting the vegetation overhead and we heard the inauguration of the trio on the network perfectly.

After three months of preparation, N. B. C. engineers will try to better the WJSV engineers' program, presenting "Kilocycle Kaydets," WRC and WMAL, at 10 p. m. Phil Merryman will be Chief Kaydet. A nifty of the show will be a four-minute composite phonograph record of many artists. You're to guess who they are. And win a prize.

Matzo, Gracie Allen's chauffeur, continues to dog the household, now trying to get a raise so he can be married, WJSV, at 9 . . . Tito Guizar returns to radio after a brief absence, WJSV, 8:15 . . . Kansas City is providing network programs for C. B. S. in a big way these days. Today's schedule includes "Between the Bookends," "Happy Hollow" and "Whoa, Pincus," between 1:30 and 3 p. m., WJSV.

"Curbstone Queries," with Bill McCormick doing the querying, sounded out the prospects of Joe Louis becoming the next world heavyweight champion, and proved the popularity of Max Baer at the same time, Tuesday noon when the new lunch-hour sidewalk forum was presented for the second time from in front of The Washington Post Building. There'll be another one today, at 12, WMAL.

A compendium of radio ideas, subjects and specific script lines which have been barred from the air for one reason or another in the last few years recently came to our attention. One comedian was refused permission to use the old story about the fellow who had rabbit for supper through the simple expedient of shooting into the alley whenever he heard the rabbits' "meouw." But, unless our old ears tricked us, we heard that gag in Joe Cook's show last Friday night. Incidentally, Cook's new baseball story about the time he played all the positions on both teams, pitching to himself and hitting his own delivery, etc., still is good for a chuckle with us.

We are told that Martin Bonesteel really will appear on the Town Hall amateur show tonight, WRC, at 8.

Maj. McBride Named As Recruiting Officer

Maj. H. L. McBride, Sixteenth Field Artillery, has been appointed recruiting officer at Fort Myer, according to an announcement yesterday by Col. Kenyon Joyce, commanding. Maj. McBride will be in charge of the enrollment of additional men authorized for the regular Army during the last session of Congress.

Officials estimate that there will be an increase of about 350 men in the organizations stationed at Fort Myer. The recruits will be divided between the Third Cavalry and the Sixteenth Field Artillery. Vacancies exist for musicians, radiomen, mechanics and other specialists. Applications are being received at the headquarters building at the post.

Hurt in Fall From Window.
